U. S. Ponders Security Act Extension to FarmMillions

Advisory Unit Meets BookkeepingProblem Stamps Considered Liberalization Sought

By Robert C. Albright.

Tax and bookkeeping methods of extending social security benefits to between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 farm and casual workers and domestic servants were explored yesterday at a conference of the Social Security Board's advisory council.

Meeting in conference with Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer, board actuaries and Treasury tax experts, the council set up by the Senate Finance Committee weighed means of liberalizing and extending the act.

J. Douglas Brown, of Princeton, chairman of the 25-man council representing employes, employers and the public, said no conclusions will be reached until specific recommendations are formulated in December.

Balanced Program Is Aim.

"When we get through, we hope to have a balanced program that will tie together," he said.

Meanwhile, it was learned council members questioned board and Treasury experts on stamp systems of tax collections used abroad, with a view to possible use in administering old age insurance for farm, self-employed and domestic workers not now covered by the act.

Two other major proposals to liberalize the act were considered by the group:

Extension of old-age insurance allowances to aged wives of annuitants and benefits for aged widows of annuitants.

Payment of benefits to totally disabled persons, starting with proof of disability.

Farm Workers Banned

Farm workers and domestic employes were originally banned from the act because of tax collection, bookkeeping and other barriers found by the Treasury to administering and financing benefits to this type of employment.

Recently Mary W. Dewson, a member of the Social Security Board, suggested a stamp tax collection system similar to those used in England and Germany as "the most feasible plan" so far advanced. It was considered in detail at yesterday's conference.

Instead of the pay roll reporting method applied to other types of beneficiaries, unfilled stamp books would be supplied farm workers and domestic servants by the Social Security board.

Farm and domestic employers would purchase from the nearest postoffice stamps covering the amount of tax assessed both the employer and the worker on the worker's weekly salary. These would be turned over to the worker, who would paste them in his book, the employer deducting the worker's share of the tax from his salary. At periodic intervals the worker would have his stamps canceled at a board branch office or postoffice. He would be given a receipt and a copy of this tax record would be sent to the Social Security board for recording.

Opinions Divided

No agreement was reached on the plan, but actuaries who have studied stamp systems operating abroad were closely queried. Chairman Brown later said there still is a division of opinion on whether the stamp system or the pay-roll reporting method now used, should be applied to any coverage of farm and domestic workers.

Brown declined to intimate what direction the council's recommenda-

32 Indicted In WPA Fraud In New Jersey

16 Corporations Cited No Agency Employes Collusion Charged

By the United Press.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 21.—A Federal grand jury today indicted 16 corporations and 32 persons on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Works Progress Administration of about $250,000 in 1935 and 1936.

No one connected with the WPA was named.

The defendants, who include all dealers in Bergen, Passaic and Essex counties in northern New Jersey who could supply sufficient material for WPA projects, were accused of collusive bidding.

The indictment was based on an investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and WPA field officers.

Collusion Charged

It charged that the defendants between August 1, 1935 and May 31, 1936, "planned and designed to charge exorbitant and unwarranted prices for materials for the United States and worked to prevent free and open bidding" for sand and stone to be used in the projects.

It said the defendants organized a "combination" to fix "arbitrary prices . . . considerably in excess of the market price and in excess of the price at which the defendants would and did continue to sell sand and stone to dealers" and others.

The basic price fixed by the defendants was approximately $2 a cubic yard for sand and $3 a cubic yard for stone, "with slight variations," according to the size of the stone, the indictment said. The defendants made "statements to discourage bidding on Administration projects by others than themselves," it added.

Quarry Firm Named

"The said defendants would give a semblance of competition among bidders and would submit bids that would assure the award being made to the bidders agreed upon by said

Reliefer Ordered To Do Cooking; Wife Gets His Job

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 21 (AP).—Judge Curio today ordered George Smith, 38, to let Mrs. Smith take over his WPA job and "you stay home, do the cooking and take care of the kids."

"That suits me, judge," Smith replied.

Probation Officer Preston Crook told Judge Corio that Smith was behind in payments for support of his wife and their four children.

Mayor for Lehman If He Backs New Deal

Record Theft 'Solved' Police Officer Held Denounced in Line-Up

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 21.—Police Lieut. Cuthbert J. Behan, a member of the force for 19 years, was denounced by Police Commissioner Valentine today as the man who stole the records of 7,200 arrests from a Brooklyn police station, thus temporarily impeding the investigation into Brooklyn justice ordered by Gov. Lehman.

Behan, 44, tall, broad-shouldered and gray-haired, denied the charge before Magistrate Matthew J. Troy, who held him in $25,000 bail for a hearing next Friday.

Deputy Chief Inspector John De Martino signed the complaint alleging second-degree grand larceny.

Valentine's denunciation of Behan as a man who brought disgrace to the police department was delivered to detectives assembled to observe prisoners in the morning line-up.

Arrested after a night of questioning, Behan showed no nervousness when he was paraded in front of the bright lights—the first police lieutenant to be placed in the line-up since that routine was instituted here.

Twice he retorted angrily when Inspector John J. Donovan questioned him about the theft of the records, calling the questions "nonsensical."

"This creature!" Valentine said to the detectives when Behan had been led away. "We hang our heads in shame!"

John Harlan Amen, special prosecutor appointed by Gov. Lehman to investigate Brooklyn law enforcement, said his inquiry would cover Behan's case.

As a result of the lieutenant's arrest, it was learned, City Commissioner of Investigation William B. Herlands will be in a position to turn over to Amen two complete trial briefs with which to open the inquiry. One was understood to relate to the Brooklyn fur racket, which precipitated the investigation, and the other to the theft of the police records.

Urges Declaration Support Conditional Governor Is Silent

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Mayor LaGuardia of New York made it emphatically clear today that Gov. Lehman could expect no support from him in his campaign for re-election unless he came out anew for the New Deal.

Emerging from a conference on politics and housing with President Roosevelt, the scrappy little mayor and leader in the American Labor Party said "support of the Federal Administration" was a principal factor in the New York campaign and an issue throughout the country.

He did not disclose Mr. Roosevelt's attitude, but he criticized Lehman, Democratic and Labor Party candidate for a fourth term as Governor, for declining to reply directly to reporters' questions Tuesday, following a talk with the President, whether he would indorse the New Deal in his campaign

Lehman Refuses Comment

Asked if he would support Lehman, the mayor replied:

"You boys left that question unanswered the other day. There is no law against answering questions. Lehman should have answered the question you boys put to him."

He added he would indorse only Senatorial and Congressional candidates who "can be depended on to support the Federal Administration."

Told at Corning, N. Y., of the mayor's statement, Lehman declined to comment.

Reporters, having in mind Lehman's opposition last year to the Roosevelt court bill, asked the Governor Tuesday whether he would "stress and support" the National Administration in the State campaign.

Lehman said only he would "discuss all the issues and they will develop as the campaign progresses."

"What I'm concerned about," LaGuardia said, "is that we must

Ming Throne Pretender Is Jailed as a Thief

Peiping, Oct. 21 (AP).—This day is woe and bitterness for Chu Tachi, 26-year-old self-styled pretender to the ancient Ming throne of China. He started serving a one-year prison sentence for stealing the purse of a schoolgirl after he had frittered away his last copper in pleasures.

Chu claims direct descent from Chu Yuan-chang, the first Ming emperor, whose reign began in 1368.

'Perfect Husband' Freed in Killing Of Wife's Lover

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP).—Rudolph Sikora, "the perfect husband," was acquitted by a jury tonight of a charge he murdered Edward Solomon, the man who stole the love of his wife.

The jury of 11 married men and a bachelor deliberated approximately an hour and a half.

The court had given the jury four possible verdicts: Conviction with the death penalty, conviction with life imprisonment, conviction with 14 or more years imprisonment—and acquittal.

Chess King Takes The Princess in Elkton Nuptials

Baltimore, Oct. 21 (AP).—It's unusual, in chess, for the king to take the queen, but Jose R. Capablanca, former world chess king, made the right moves to capture a princess.

Capablanca, a native of Havana and Cuban commercial attache in Europe, was honeymooning today with his bride, the former Russian Royal Princess Olga Chagodaif, of New York, after a quick trip to Elkton, Maryland "Gretna Green," with a bridal party of diplomats.

Eugenio Castillo, Cuban consul in Baltimore, was best man. A dinner and reception were given here after the wedding by A. W. Donegan, retired member of the United States consular service.

Failure to Use Crosswalks Causes Most Traffic Deaths

By Howard F. Wentworth.

(No. 2 in a Series.)

"The deceased was crossing street NOT at crosswalk."

Behind this brief notation on police records of pedestrian traffic deaths—and it appears more frequently than any other fatal accident cause—lies the story of why Washington has failed to keep pace with national safety efforts.

Careless walking habits have accounted for 76 per cent of all District accident deaths this year—and in 77 per cent of those cases pedestrians were found at fault.

On the basis of these startling figures, authorities are convinced that Washington would be a model traffic city from the standpoint of fatalities—if it wasn't for pedestrians.

But why pick on the pedestrian? Why not first control the careless and negligent motorist? The answer not only is found in records at the District Morgue, but it was found yesterday on streets throughout the city.

With particular attention to the most frequent cause of pedestrian deaths—crossing NOT at crosswalks—observations revealed:

An elderly man slipped and fell in the middle of uptown Connecticut avenue while trying to dodge his way through traffice 50 feet away from the nearest crosswalk. He was lucky. Traffic stopped until he was safely on the opposite curb.

A young nursemaid, a little girl trotting at her side, risked two lives

Merit Body Acts to Study Group Health

Vote Orders Survey Medical Costs Hit Roosevelt Lauded New Chief Chosen

Federal, State and city administrators, composing the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada, yesterday voted to explore fully the possibilities in group medicine.

Closing its thirtieth annual conference, the assembly set in motion a survey aimed to disclose what types of group health are suited to the varying needs of governmental agencies and what types now are functioning. The data will be available to assembly members.

The resolution authorizing the survey noted that the cost of medical care is above the pocketbooks of wage and salary earners.

The assembly, in a second resolution, commended President Roosevelt on the June 24 executive orders which extended the merit system to some 81,000 additional Federal employes. It did not urge legislation which would further extend the orders because members explained the assembly to be a nonprofit organization and if it entered the lobbying field it might be subject to taxation.

For its new president, the assembly chose David V. Jennings, chief examiner, Milwaukee County Civil Service Commission. He succeeds Charles H. Bland, Canadian Civil Service Commissioner.

Jennings was succeeded on the executive council by Emory Olson, who once was associated with the school of public affairs at American University here. Olson, at present, is chairman of the Los Angeles Civil Service Commission.

C. L. Campbell, of the New York State commission, was appointed to the council for a term of four years.

Hearing Ends Week

The extraordinary grand jury hearing charges that the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society are unlawful combinations in restraint of trade closed its first week yesterday with the Government deep in presentation of the group health association controversy which caused the prosecution to be started.

Still on the stand as the session ended was William F. Penniman, deputy governor of the Federal Home Loan Bank system and first president of G. H. A. He was at the helm when physicians' organizations opened the campaign of warnings against participation in the co-operative enterprise which the Government now claims to have been a conspiracy to violate the Serman antitrust act.

Penniman's testimony was understood to have recounted early struggles of the group health venture, which was sponsored by Federal home loan bank authorities to reduce overhead cost of personnel sickness.

Penniman said when he left the hearing room that he could not discuss his testimony but he issued the following statement:

"No one can question the definite relationship between physical fitness

Campaign Fund Petition Against Tydings Dismissed

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 21.—Judge Eugene O'Dunne today dismissed a petition questioning the campaign expenditures of Senator Millard E. Tydings and declared unconstitutional the section of the corrupt practices act under which the petition was filed.

Terming the whole act "a piece of absurdity," Judge O'Dunne said he declared section 187 invalid "as attempting to make out of court of record a mere commission for taking testimony, to merely report what it considers irregular."

Section 187 provides that within 30 days after an election any defeated candidate or ten qualified voters may swear to petitions alleging corrupt practices, present the petitions to any county circuit court or the superior court of Baltimore, and ask the court to examine the facts.

The act limits the expenditures of candidates to $4,250, and ten Democrats recently filed a petition charging Tydings had violated the act in the primary election when expenses in his campaign totaled $88,814.

Japanese Take Canton Without a Battle; City Fired by Fleeing Army

Attack Is 'Surprise' Metropolis Deserted Vital Bridge Blasted Factories Destroyed

By the Associated Press.

Canton, Oct. 21.—A Japanese tank corps rumbled into Canton this afternoon, scoring one of the most astounding victories of the Chinese-Japanese war.

The tanks were followed by detachments of the South China expeditionary force—called a "model army"—which just 10 days ago landed on the shores of Bias Bay, 125 miles southeast of Canton.

Shortly after noon the first tanks approached the Kwangtung provincial capital from the north. Two hours later they were rumbling down the east bund, and by nightfall the Japanese conquerors were deployed in force throughout the city, confident of complete occupation without firing a shot.

Met No Opposition

Apparently they had met no opposition from the hundreds of thousands of provincial troops that had been massed north and east of Canton to check the invasion of the estimated 60,000 Japanese.

In the wake of the tank corps came a long line of trucks bearing Japanese infantrymen.

Before the Japanese arrived, the Chinese blew up the $8,000,000 Pearl River Bridge and blasted important utilities plants and factories with land mines applying the "scorched earth and broken tile" policy with which Chinese forces have been falling back.

Fires Spread in City

Large fires were visible in some sections of the metropolis, apparently set by the retreating defenders. The 1,000,000 civilian population of Canton proper had been reduced to an estimated 50,000 by a mass exodus of noncombatants.

The entrance of the Japanese came as a complete surprise, although the blasting of the Pearl River Bridge had served as a warning the invaders were approaching in their "back door" campaign.

It seemed either that the Japanese had sidestepped Chinese defenses or that the Chinese had decided not to oppose their mechanically superior but numerically inferior foe.

Trenches Deserted

There had been strong indications that China's Kwangtung forces would wage a last-ditch battle for the city. Hundreds were slain last Friday and Saturday when the Japanese, first spearing north from Bias Bay to gain a "back door" foothold, swept through Waichow.

Trenches had been dug and barricades thrown up in the Canton streets.

Intermittent shellfire could be heard tonight, indicating that there still might be some flanking resistance on the outskirts of the city.

Until today Canton had not been invaded by a foreign force since the war betwen the British and Chinese in 1858, when for a time the city was administered by the British.

Officials Had Fled

The Japanese found that high government officials had fled to Yungyun, 92 miles north of Canton.

Application of the "scorched earth" policy by the retreating Chinese gave Canton the aspect of a bombarded city tonight, although Canton proper had been spared in aerial warfare that engulfed many other parts of Kwangtung Province in the ten-day invasion.

Electric power in Canton was cut off and the nearly deserted metropolis during the night was in darkness, broken only by the headlights of Japanese military automobiles and the fitful glare of the fires consuming abandoned buildings.

Murphy Strike Course Called 'Treasonable'

Spy Explains Motive Meant U. S. No Harm Aimed to Clear Self

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Oct. 21.—Guenther Gustav Rumrich today explained his apparent ineptness as a German spy by saying that up to the time of his attempt to secure 50 blank United States passports by posing as an undersecretary of State—the episode which led to his arrest last February—it had never been his intention to give any information of value to German agents.

Rumrich, the 26-year-old mess sergeant who deserted from the United States Army in January, 1936, said that his only purpose in corresponding with German agents was to collect information on German activities in the United States. He intended, he said, to turn this information over to the United States Government, in order to clear his Army record and secure reappointment to the Army.

His Fifth Day on Stand

Rumrich, who has pleaded guilty to espionage, completed his fifth consecutive day on the witness stand in the trial of Johanna Hofmann, Erich Glaser and Otto Herrmann Voss, three of the 18 defendants indicted with him. The trial is being held in the United States District Court before Judge John C. Knox and a jury.

Rumrich's testimony was given under the gentle questioning of Benjamin A. Matthews, counsel for Glaser, in the opening day of cross-examination. On direct testimony Rumrich had told of the many requests for information he had re-

Judge Is Dies Witness Raises Politics Issue Reds Rush Denials

By Sidney Olson.

An ousted city manager and a Republican judge joined yesterday in accusing Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, of "treasonable" activities in the 1937 sit-down strikes.

The two men, Judge Paul V. Galoda, of the Genesee County Circuit Court of Appeals at Flint, and John M. Barringer, former city manager of Flint, were witnesses before the House Committee on Un-American Affairs.

As witnesses yesterday continued attempts to link the committee for industrial organization with communism, the flood of denials continued to pour into the committee. While no figures were available, it was evident that far more than a majority of those named as Communists since the investigaiton began in the summer have indignantly denied the charges as utterly false.

Judge Gadola was the one who emphasized his political inclinations in the session. When Representative Mosier (Democrat), Ohio, who was defeated in the primary this year, explained that he wanted to remove political implications from the testimony, he noted that Murphy was a Democrat.

Judge Gadola snapped: "I'm a Republican! We didn't have any Democratic judges in Michigan until these shirt-tail riders came along."

Judge Gadola then slapped at Murphy's tactics in the strike wave, saying that the soft-spoken, red-haired Governor prevented execution of a court order Gadola issued

Czechs 'No Longer Interested' In Alliance, They Tell Soviet

By the United Press.

Prague, Oct. 21.—Czechoslovakia, reorganizing along the lines of closer friendship with Germany, tonight informed Soviet Russia that she is "no longer interested" in maintaining the Czech-Soviet military alliance.

The government's decision was said on authority to have been delivered to Soviet Minister Serge Alexandrowsky when he called at the foreign office and conferred with Foreign Minister Frantisek Chvalkovsky.

The Czech-Soviet alliance, promising Russian aid in event of an unprovoked aggression upon Czechoslovakia, was drawn up in 1935 and was a companion pact to the French-Czech alliance.

During the Sudeten crisis Russia announced that the red army would go to the aid of the Czechs if the latter were invaded and if France took military action in accordance with her commitments.

A showdown on the alliances was narrowly averted when the four-power Munich meeting—Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy—agreed on the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia. Russia, bitterly condemning the pact, was excluded from all of the negotiations.

Chvalkovsky, former Czech Minister to Rome and sympathetic to the dictator powers, was understood to have been told during his recent conferences with Chancellor Hitler at Munich that Germany was anxious for a scrapping of the Soviet alliance as a basis for the Reich's "protective" collaboration with Czechoslovakia.

The Soviet Minister conferred

Banquet Closes P.-T.A. Session At Alexandria

Roanoke Woman Talks
Governor Heads Guests

Mrs. E. H. Ould, of Roanoke, spoke at a banquet last night at the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria, closing the thirty-fifth annual gathering of the Virginia Branch of the National Congress of Parent-Teachers Associations, held this week at the First Baptist Church.

Mrs. Ould's subject was "Fundamentals for Joyful Living" and she said she based her talk on words found stamped on an old box of patterns belonging to her grandmother. They were: "Lay on straight of the goods; place all pieces in position before cutting; allow for growth; pink the seams."

She said the greatest contribution parents and teachers can make to the youth of today is an objective true to line with possibilities for growth toward a fine ideal, suitable to individual use and a real asset toward group living. The chief business of the parent is to help the child adjust to the world, not the world to the child, as that would be placing the pattern on the bias, not the straight of the goods, she said.

Hellmuth Is Toastmaster

"To teach how to think, not what to think, to help him measure success not in terms of salary but of service; man's success and happiness in life is largely due to his ability to get along with people," she continued. "Life's central demand is to be a real person, ready for use, and our contribution may be measured with this sentence: 'Did the pattern fit for use in life, was it lovely to look at and did it wear well?'"

Everett A. Hellmuth, of Alexandria, was toastmaster, and guests of honor were presented by Mrs. S. C. Cox, State president of the association. They included Gov. James H. Price of Virginia; Mrs. J. K. Pettingill, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers; Dr. Sidney H. Hall, State superintendent of education; Roland Cook, president of the Virginia Education Association; Miss Plunkett, president, Virginia School Trustees Association; Dr. William M. Stauffer, Virginia department of welfare; Dr. I. C. Riggin, State department of health; Mrs. George S. Hurt, Virginia Federation of Music Clubs; Mrs. Ernest Fishburn, department president, American Legion Auxiliary; Mayor Richard L. Ruffner of Alexandria, and T. C. Williams, superintendent of the Alexandria schools.

Dr. Alexander Speaks

Dr. Fred M. Alexander, supervisor of Negro education, State department of education, spoke at the morning business session. He said, "Historians tell us that the most significant change that is taking place in our world today is the growing sense of social responsibility of the people in the upper economic and cultural brackets for that part of the population that is ill housed, ill clothed, ill fed and ill educated."

Other speakers were Miss Maude Wallace, assistant director of education, and Dr. Mildred Thurow Tate, of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Round-table discussion of the morning session was conducted by a group from Fairfax County, led by Mrs. Elsie Davis Bosley, supervisor of elementary education, and showed outstanding co-operation in all county units.

An invitation was received to hold the 1939 session at Newport News and resolutions outlining the educational policies of the group were the business of the board of managers at the afternoon meeting. Officers elected in 1937 are to serve another year, the only change being appointment of Mrs. Gustav A. Peple, of Richmond, as State publicity chairman, to fill a vacancy.

Dr. Ashton to St. Louis

Dr. John T. Ashton left yesterday for St. Louis, Mo., to attend the annual convention of the American Dental Association. Tomorow morning Dr. Ashton will receive the highest honor in dentistry. Dr. Ashton is the thirteenth Virginian to receive this honor since the college was organized in 1902.

Red Cross 1,000 Short

Mrs. Robert A. Bowman, chairman of the Soroptimist Club for the annual Red Cross roll call, has announced response to date is 1,000 short of the goal. The quota for Alexandria is 2,800 members and, while contributions amount to $2,418.64, the membership is only 1,800.

Seminary Hill Organizes

The Seminary Hill Civic Association was formed Thursday night at a meeting in the library of Episcopal High School. John T. Worthington was chosen president, Mrs. Clifford J. Durr, vice president, and J. B. Hutt, secretary-treasurer.

The group is organized for "the purpose of furthering the welfare and proper development of the section represented within its membership." One of the principal purposes of the organization will be to co-operate with the City Council of Alexandria and the boards of supervisers of Arlington and Fairfax counties.

D. A. R. to Mark Grave

John Alexander Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will place a D. A. R. historic marker at the grave of John Westcott, Revolutionary soldier, in the Presbyterian Cemetery at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

Mrs. George E. Pickett is chairman for the ceremony and the address will be by Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, Virginia State regent of the D. A. R. Miss Ann Westcott will unveil the marker and the dedicatory poem and placing of flowers will be by Miss Marion E. Moncure, regent of the John Alexander Chapter.

'Drought Is Over for G. O. P.,' Says Landon Sheppard Asks Again About Toulson Incident

Omaha, Nebr., Oct. 21 (AP).—"It looks like the drought is over for us Republicans," Alfred M. Landon stated during a brief stopover here today.

LANDON

All over the country, Landon said, there is a trend which indicates that the American people want stability, which alone means peace and prosperity.

"They have not been getting it or anything like it," he continued. "The Administration has had six years in which to do the job, and still it isn't done."

Landon predicted Kansas would go Republican, and "everything I hear indicates Iowa and Minnesota will do the same."

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, said yesterday he had again asked the Postoffice Department what action it had taken on charges that Maude R. Toulson, postmistress at Salisbury, Md., violated the law in campaigning for Representative Lewis (Democrat), Maryland, who sought the Democratic Senatorial nomination.

The Postoffice Department acknowledged receipt of the charges on September 10, but no reply showing action has been received by the committee. Sheppard said the committee would insist on a response to its request before election.

Indianapolis, Oct. 21 (AP).—J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said here last night the Republican Party offered voters only "a kind of warmed over, camouflaged New Deal."

Col. Johnson, Spanish-American and World War veteran, spoke to Indiana Democratic war veterans.

Johnson, commending expenditure for the Army and Navy, said President Roosevelt hated but did not fear war. He told his audience he wondered how much pacifist agitation was "inspired from those nations engaged in preparation for war in the hopes of catching the United States again unprepared."

Lexington, N. C., Oct. 21 (AP).—James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, telegraphed W. O. Burgin, of Lexington, today urging his co-operation in efforts to decide a Democratic nominee for Congress in the Eighth District before the November elections.

Both Burgin and C. B. Beane, of Rockingham, claim to have been nominated in a Democratic runoff primary July 2, and since then the contest has been waged continuously before State and county election boards and in the courts. Should the Democrtas have no candidate in the election, the Eighth District seat would go by default to the Republican candidate, John R. Jones, a former district solicitor.

Beaver Falls, Pa., Oct. 21 (AP).—Judge Arthur H. James declared here in a campaign address that Gov. Earle had abandoned his race for United States Senator and now was "running for a suspended sentence in the court of public opinion."

Judge James said a visit of Democratic leaders to President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N. Y., resulted in removal of all mention of the New Deal from Democratic campaign boards.

He charged "even New Dealers consider the Earle administration has been libel on what they stand for."

Attacking "immunity and protection these men have demanded and obtained," James declared:

"In any other State in the Union the Legislature already would have made them explain their acts or else impeached them."

Tax Sale December 12

Charles T. Jesse, county treasurer, announced yesterday that all real estate on which taxes for the year 1936 have not been paid will be sold at public auction December 12. Under the law the treasurer said the property must be advertised at least 30 days prior to the sale.

October 31 will be the deadline for payment of taxes to avoid cost of publication, which is chargeable to taxpayers, Jesse said.

Total assessments of real estate for 1936 were $642,587 and the amount unpaid as of September 30 was $37,146 or 5.7 per cent.

Capital Transit Co. officials are considering an offer of $7,500 by the Montgomery County commissioners for the controversial right-of-way strip in the center of Connecticut avenue in Chevy Chase formerly used for a street car line.

The county commissioners boosted their $5,000 offer as a last effort before instituting condemnation proceedings. The county desires the strip for improvement of Connecticut avenue, which has been advocated by practically all of civic and business groups of the area.

Approximately 3,238 persons have been cited to appear before Montgomery County registration officials next Tuesday and defend their right to vote in the general elections in November. They include 1,839 Democrats and 1,399 Republicans.

Registration officials said this was the largest group of citations in recent years. They said the large number was attributed to two reasons, first, many persons have died or moved from the county since the last general registration in 1919, and second, Republicans and Democrats alike have put forth strenuous efforts to "purge" the other's voting lists before the November 8 elections.

Republicans had set a goal of 5,000 Democratic removals from registration lists. Democrats had been equally active, the large number of citations shows.

Registration officials will sit from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m. in each of the voting places of the county to decide whether or not the person whose right to vote is challenged is entitled to vote. The permanent board of registry will sit at Rockville Courthouse for the same purpose.

Persons not satisfied with the action of the registration officials have the right to appeal to the Circuit Court not later than the Saturday prior to election.

Berwyn School Walls Finished Ahead of Time

G.O.P. Registration Lags
Kiwanis Club Elects
Colored Youth Parley

Workmen have completed foundation walls of the $67,000 addition to Berwyn Elementary School, Stuart H. Anderson, resident engineer inspector for the Public Works Administration, reported yesterday to Col. M. E. Gilmore, regional director. This completion is well ahead of schedule.

The PWA has provided an outright grant of $185,000 toward Prince Georges County schools. The Berwyn addition is the first building to be constructed under this program. Work on this and other WPA-financed projects has been speeded up to comply with Administrator Ickes' order that men and material must be put to work as quickly as possible. The school is scheduled for completion by April. The next step scheduled is pouring concrete slabs for the first floor and erection of the higher walls.

Approximately 30 men are engaged on this project and more will be added as the work progresses, Anderson, a World War engineer officer, now is a major in the Reserve Corps.

Democratic registrations in Prince Georges County exceeded Republican registrations by 10,136, it was revealed today when the county supervisors of elections made public final figures.

New voters put on the election books this month have brought the voting strength of the county to 36,191, an increase of 3,280 over the 1936 registration figure. Of this number 22,821 were registered as Democrats, 12,685 as Republicans and 687 as independents or in minor parties.

Nearly 3,000 of the 3,280 new registrations were Democratic.

Prof. Harold F. Cotterman, of the University of Maryland, has been nominated without opposition as president of the Prince Georges County Kiwanis Club, to succeed Edward Duncan, it was announced by William Bowie, chairman of the nominating committee.

Nominations tabulated by Bowie's committee indicated there would be only one contest when the club votes next Thursday. For second vice president Herbert W. Wells and S. C. Helfer, present secretary, are opposed. J. Raymond Fletcher is unopposed for first vice president, and Harry D. Eisenhauer for treasurer.

In addition, nine directors are to be elected from a list of 18 candidates. A club secretary will be chosen by the officers and directors following the elections.

A conference on problems of colored youth will be held today by the department of public welfare and health of the Maryland State Parent-Teachers Congress at the Maryland Teachers' College, Bowie.

Speakers will be Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the Maryland department of health; Dr. O. W. Holmes, president of Morgan College; Prof. Howard L. Cornish, of Morgan College; Mrs. V. H. Whyte, of Baltimore, and the Rev. L. S. Moore, of Chester, Pa.

Wilson Tells Of Welfare Aid In Fairfax

First-Aid Kit Approved
Samaritans Organize
Methodists to Rally

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2068-M.

Supt. W. Travis Wilson, of the Fairfax County Public Welfare Department reports that 195 cases were aided last month by his office at a cost of $1,030.35. Of these, 79 received financial aid, 24 received surplus Federal commodities and 17 services of welfare workers only, and 48 cases were closed.

Many cases in the county have not been approved for old-age assistance, aid to the blind or aid to dependent children as investigations and reports have not been completed. These cases are being completed as soon as possible so as to transfer them from general relief.

Wilson said the old-age assistance program was one of the most misunderstood forms of relief, many people believing this help was in the form of a pension to be paid to persons reaching the age of 65. He pointed out that the grant was issued only on actual proof of need, and in such cases only $20 a month is allowed. If the person earns any amount during the month this must be deducted from the allowance.

The welfare department not only handles relief problems of all types but it also makes investigations for WPA and National Youth Administration, selects CCC applicants, takes care of court probation and parole service and distributes Federal surplus food products and clothing.

The Fairfax County Red Cross has authorized purchase of a first aid emergency kit for the Fairfax Volunteer Fire Department ambulance. Harold F. Weller, chairman of highway first aid stations, reports a station will be located at the junction of the Lee highway and Lee boulevard near Fairfax.

An organization to be known as the Good Samaritan League has been formed by the men of Happy Valley for welfare work and the creation of a better community spirit. The league will meet on the first Wednesday of each month in the community hall. Arthur W. Bowling was elected president of the league; Joseph Starry, sr., vice president, and Russell Lacey, secretary-treasurer.

Sweeps Luck Smiles on 5 Families Here

Dentist's Wife Winner
Woman, 80, in Money
$150,000 Top Prize

Fortune yesterday smiled on five Washington families as first drawings were made in Dublin on the Irish Sweepstakes.

An 80-year-old woman who had never bought a lottery ticket before and a dentist's family stood a chance of winning as much as $150,000, while others were assured of at least $2,172.

Mrs. Sarah E. Martin, who lives with her daughter, Mrs. Mabel Burke, at 2001 Sixteenth street northwest, was identified as "Genie," who drew Queen's Shilling, one of the horses due to run in the Cesarewitch next Wednesday at Newmarket, England.

Family's Names Signed

The other Washington family that drew a runner included Mrs. Henrietta Becker, 2936 Upton street, wife of Dr. George H. Becker, a dentist, with offices in the Farragut Building.

Her ticket was signed "George H., Val and Hennie," the names of her 24-year-old son, a composing room employe of The Post, her 23-year- the Spencer Lens Co., and herself. Their horse is Tramento.

Neither Queen's Shilling nor Tramonto, though in the running, is among the five favorites.

Draws Favorite

Richard T. Trent, of Sparrows Ponit, Md., outside Baltimore, drew Black Speck, which is one of the favorites and 15 to 1 in the betting.

Americans held 25 of the 42 tickets drawn on three of the favorites at Dublin, according to the Associated Press. In all Americans held 617 out of 1,162 winning stubs so far.

Unless the Washingtonians who drew runners have horses that are in the first, second and third winner of the race, they will win no more than those who drew non-runners, $2,172. The first prize is $150,000, the second, $75,000, and the third $50,000.

Other Washingtonians who were assured of the minimum prize of $2,172 by drawing non-runners are:

Henry H. Flather, 1528 Eighteenth street northwest, a customers' man at the W. H. Hibbs Co., and Mr. and Mrs. Cephas T. Steedman, of 1916 Kearney street northeast, who signed themselves as "The Twins."

An anonymous person who gave the name of "Lucky Girl" and the address 501 Seventh street northwest, which is the Bank of Commerce and Savings.

William R. Burgner, of Fredericksburg, Va., drew the same horse as Flather, Near Relation.

More Washingtonians may come in for smaller prizes when 300 cash awards of $500 and 50 cash prizes of $530 will be decided. A total of $7,026,500 out of a collected $12,232,405 will go to lucky lottery winners over the world.

Mrs. Martin Thrilled

Mrs. Martin, who drew Queen's Shilling, said she was thrilled over the prospect of winning a fortune but that it has all come too sudden for her to imagine what she will do with it

Dr. Becker didn't know that his family had purchased a $2.60 ticket, but Mrs. Becker said it was the fifth or sixth time she had bought one. She added that she had taken chances on various lotteries—from raffles for the benefit of orphans to movie bank nights—but had never before won anything.

The favorites in the Cesarewitch race, according to the Associated Press, are Black Speck, with the betting odds of 15 to 1; Dubonnet, 10 to 1; Solonaise, 15 to 1; Snipe Wood, 100 to 7, and Snake Lightning, 14 to 1.

Eight Americans drew Black Speck, ten Snipe Wood, and seven Dubonnet.

An unexplained power failure in the section of Dublin in which the Sweeps headquarters is located dimmed the lights and caused the drum holding the tickets to stop revolving as nurses were drawing the tickets, Associated Press reported from Dublin.

Police guarding the ceremony kept a close watch on the equipment during the recess until emergency lighting was brought into use.

Bearded Bandit And Pal Get $118 From Fiance

Two bandits, one with a flowing beard, alighted from a sedan early yesterday, jabbed a gun into the ribs of Leslie McClanahan, 24, and escaped with $118 which he had planned to use for his forthcoming marriage.

The Western Automobile Supply Co. salesman also lost his watch in the holdup at Ninth street and Florida avenue northeast, which was one of a series of robberies committed yesterday.

A liquor store at 1432 New Jersey avenue northeast was robbed of $40 and liquor valued at $154. The R. & S. Cleaners, 1405 Eighteenth street northwest, was robbed of $10. A Chinese restaurant at 1500 Seventh street northwest was robbed of $20. Camera equipment valued at $30 was stole from a picture studio at 1521 Seventh street northwest.

Dorothy Hale, Actress, Rumored Engaged To Hopkins, Is Killed in New York Plunge

Was on Stage, in Films
Widow of Artist
Planned Trip Here

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 21.—A 16-story plunge brought death early today to Dorothy Hale, actress and a friend of WPA Administrator Hopkins.

Clad in a black evening dress on which was pinned a corsage of tea roses, the actress' body was found on the sidewalk below the window of her apartment in the exclusive Hampshire House facing on Central Park.

The police recorded the case as "fell or jumped—probably suicide."

Friends of Hopkins, who was in seclusion at the temporary White House, at Hyde Park, said he was "deeply shocked." Hopkins and Mrs. Hale were introduced last spring by James Roosevelt, son of the President. They were seen together often after that and their engagement was rumored, but neither would discuss the report.

Mrs. Hale, 33, was the widow of Gardner Hale, Chicago artist who was killed in 1931 when his automobile went over a 500-foot cliff in California. Previously she had been divorced from T. Gaillard Thomas 2d, millionaire clubman.

After her marriage to Thomas, she maintained homes in Paris and Southampton, Long Island, and later shared a studio with Estelle Manville, now Princess Bernadotte of Sweden, and dabbled in sculpture.

Mrs. Hale had many friends among theatrical people in New York and was particularly close to Rosamond Pinchot, the tall, socially prominent actress, who was found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning in a garage on her Long Island estate near Oyster Bay last January 24.

She was the daughter of James P. Donovan, Pittsburgh real estate operator. She left home at 16 to seek a theatrical career. Her first appearance was in the chorus of "Lady, Be Good."

Played in Films

Several years ago she was acclaimed by a Hollywood producer as a "great movie find," but she appeared in only a few pictures. Later she played in summer stock, had a small stage bit at one time with Fred and Adele Astaire, and last season, under the name of Malan Cullen, played a part in the short-lived play, "The Red Harvest."

Friends said that only yesterday she gave a cocktail party in her apartment for Lawrence A. Steinhardt, United States Minister to Peru, and later went to dinner and the theater. Margaret Case, a personal friend, said that she was with Mrs. Hale up to 7 p. m. yesterday and that the actress was in good spirits. She said Mrs. Hale told her she planned to leave today for an extended visit in Washington.

Detectives said the window from which Mrs. Hale plunged had a low sill and she may have fallen when she attempted to open it. They found a slip of paper in a typewriter bearing the names of Mrs. Hale's sister, Elizabeth Donovan of Pittsburgh and John H. Vincent, New York lawyer. They said there was a note addressed apparently to Mrs. Hale's maid, Mary, saying she would not need her today.

Vincent said Mrs. Hale had been subject to a recurring illness and had been in a hospital several times in the last five years. He handled Mrs. Hale's estate and "minor matters," he said.

"She was not a wealthy woman," he added. "I think her greatest ambition was to play on the legitimate stage on Broadway."

The lawyer said he had not seen her for more than a month. He met her after she married Gardner Hale, he said, and handled Hale's affairs until his death. Vincent notified Mrs. Hale's family, who left at once for New York.

Miss Perkins Sees Labor Pact In 6 Months

Expresses 'Great Hope'
Has 'Concrete' Basis
Has Talked to Leaders

Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday announced she has "great hopes" that an end is in sight to the three-year warfare between the Committee for Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor.

The Secretary said she has "something concrete" on which to base her hopes, and intimated that peace might be attained within six months.

Pressed by reporters for more information, she declined to elaborate her statement.

But the Secretary, who recently proposed that a 13-man committee—five A. F. L., five C. I. O. and three public representatives—be named to arbitrate the fight, said forcefully that the Administration "ardently desires" a labor peace and is using every means to hurry it along.

Miss Perkins Sees Chiefs

President Roosevelt dropped his "a plague o' both your houses" attitude a fortnight ago when he wired the federation's Houston convention a request that labor "make and keep the peace." At that time Daniel J. Tobin, head of the teamsters, largest A. F. L. union, stunned the convention with a warning that unless the President's plea were heeded, the 350,000 teamsters would bolt the federation.

He insisted o na revival of the unavailing peace talks of last year. Tobin, an old friend of Mr. Roosevelt, served in 1932 and 1936 as chairman of the labor committee of the Democratic national convention.

Secretary Perkins disclosed she has conferred with Tobin and also with David Dubinsky, chief of the C. I. O.'s International Ladies Garment Workers, who has been quoted as saying "no fundamental obstacles" block an armistice.

Has Talked With Lewis

Miss Perkins then added she had talked over her mediation program with John L. Lewis, burly C. I. O. boss, but not with William Green, A. F. of L. president, as yet. However, she said "others" have talked to Green about the plan.

The Secretary said:

"I have had very definite signs that the desire for peace among the rank and file is reflected in a growing desire for peace among their leaders.

"I think there is no question that the Administration ardently desires peace in the labor movement, partly because it is honestly convinced that the progress of labor will be served by peace and partly because of the delicate economic situation at the present time.

"Both sides are not as adamant as they weer."

$900,000 for Aid To Be Repeated in Next Year Budget

No increase in relief funds for the District will be sought by the District Commissioners unless recommended by Investigator Burdette J. Lewis, it was learned yesterday.

This meant that an item for $900,000, the same amount appropriated this year, would be requested of Congress for 1940, with a proviso that a supplemental amount would be added if Lewis' report justifies it.

Lewis has been studying the entire relief setup here since early this summer and will have his report ready for Congress when it convenes January 1.

Meanwhile, it was announced the Commissioners would send the District budget bill to the Budget Bureau next Saturday.

Surgeon Uses Living Tissue To Make Artificial Arms Work

Cords Hooked to Muscles of 'Stump'
Subjects Able to Fill Ordinary Jobs
New Use Announced for Vitamins

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 21.—A new surgical method of giving muscular movement to artificial arms, hands and fingers was announced to the American College of Surgeons today.

The surgical knife creates links of living tissue which hook the muscles of a "stump" to the cords that manipulate the artificial part.

These "hooks" are hollow tubes made from the living tissues remaining at the site of amputation. But they are unlike any tube nature ever made.

They are inside out, that is, their inside is lined with skin while their exteriors are tissues which normally lie under the skin.

These tubes are thrust like pins through and across the ends of a muscle of the "stump" of arm. Their exterior tissues take root, so that the tube unites with the muscle surrounding it.

The cord which manipulates the fingers is passed through the interior of the tube, where the skin lining protects against chafing.

Dr. Henry H. Kessler, of Newark, N. J., who described the operation, said it is estimated there are 33,000 persons in the United States with amputated arms. Artificial legs, he said, are easy to supply, but only a small proportion of the armless are able to make use of artificial limbs.

The operation to make the living links of tissue is called cineplastic amputation. The medical name for the artificial arm is a prosthesis.

Dr. Kessler described 78 cases of this operation and said that 44 of these otherwise one-armed persons are now employed in remunerative work such as clerk, lithographer, painter, truck driver, inspector of transmission lines, watchman, track walker, bookkeeper, leather embosser, machinist, elevator operator, fur sorter, laborer, needle board repairman, commercial letterer and stereotype operator.

In their work all use the "prosthetic" hands.

Dr. Emile Holman, of San Francisco, said that recovery after surgical operations can be made much easier by giving large quantities of vitamins for a week or two before. The vitamins are A, B, C and D. Three times normal dosage is given.

Dr. Holman showed by animal experiments that these vitamins raise resistance to after-effects of wounds. A and C build resistance to infections. B and D help make blood.

A person whose diet before an operation is doughnuts and coffee, Dr. Holman declared, is not a good risk.

Liquor Store Thief Gets 42-74 Years On 14 Charges

"How much does all that add up to?" stammered Thomas O. Austin, 25, colored, of Baltimore, when District Judge Jesse C. Adkins yesterday sentenced him to serve in prison 12 consecutive terms on robbery charges and two stretches for assaults with intent to kill. Austin was told the total was 42 to 74 years.

Imposing three to five years for each of ten robberies, three to four years each for two robberies to which the defendant previously had pleaded guilty and three to eight years for each of the two assaults with intent to kill, Justice Adkins said he wanted the sentence to stand as an "example to those who rob liquor stores and think they can get away with it."

Austin was charged with being one of a gang of nine colored men who robbed 34 liquor stores in Washington and Baltimore.

and efficiency on the job. Administrators have a responsibility for the elimination of waste wherever they find it. In industry as well as government administrators have long known of the large waste arising from loss of time due to sickness, much of which could be prevented. We find that workers do not go to the doctor until they are sick and it is the cost that keeps them away. We believe that when a method is provided for wage and salary earners to budget methodically for their health needs they will be able to purchase more and better medical service."

Penniman's view was confirmed by a survey made by R. R. Zimmerman, personnel director of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, who testified both Thursday and yesterday. Zimmerman found that the Federal agency lost $500,000 through preventable illness.

Beard, Gambler Here, Seeks to Get Out of Atlanta

New Orleans, Oct. 21 (AP).—Sam Beard, sentenced in Washington to 1 to 6 years for operating a horse race gambling establishment, asked the Circuit Court of Appeals today for release from the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary.

His brief alleged testimony gained through wire-tapping was inadmissable.

Beard contends he should not be confined in the Atlanta prison but in a District of Columbia prison where he would now be eligible for parole. He claimed the Atlanta warden made prisoners serve their full terms.

Osteopath Shot Seeking Lodging

Dr. Earl Willard, 60-year-old Philadelphia osteopath, was shot Thursday while seeking lodging at the home of Frank Jefferson, 24 South Pershing drive, Arlington, Va., County Detective Harry L. Woodyard reported yesterday after an investigation.

Dr. Willard was found lying on roadside by Frederick Ball, of Ashburn, Va., and taken to the office of Dr. Frank Bernard Schultz in Falls Church. The injured man was later removed to Georgetown Hospital where he was said to be suffering from a gunshot wound in the right shoulder.

Jefferson told police Dr. Willard went to his home and said he could sleep on the porch. When he was told to leave, Jefferson said, his visitor began using strong language and apparently held something in his hand behind his back.

"It was dark," Jefferson said, "and I went in the house and got my .22 rifle and shot." He was not held.

Pope Likens Nazis to Judas In Type, Soul

Also Recalls Julian Osservatore Quotes Him He Mentions Nero

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Oct. 21.—The Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano said today Pope Pius had expressed deep grief over persecutions which had "mounted as far as the sacred purple of a high pastor."

Describing the Pontiff's remarks to 300 archeologistss yesterday at his summer palace, Castel Gondolfo, the newspaper related:

"He recalled the work of Julian the Apostate with sad, extremely sad, persecutions which, if they were not the most violent and bloodiest, were extremely uncompromising, deceitful and shrewd.

"The work has been revived not without informers and apostles of the type and soul of Judas. So saying, the Pope meant to recall in the minds of his beloved sons things with which quite recently newspapers and speakers have been concerned . . . which have surprised and astonished the world . . .

"In fact, the Pontiff continued, the dignity of man seemed to him badly served indeed when one had reached exactly the same point reached by Julian the Apostate even though he was not the first to blame Christians for persecutions with which they were afflicted. Nero, too, had done it for the burning of Rome and the persecution which followed it."

(A week ago L'Osservatore Romano published an account of the attack on October 8 on the palace of Cardinal Innitzer in Vienna.)

The paper described the Pontiff as optimistic for the future and quoted him as saying:

"We ask God constantly that he may be willing to concede us a good death. It would certainly be restful to an old man and worker who is now tired."

Md. Woman Wins $20,000 Crash Suit

She had sued Hawken and Mrs. Josephine Rorabacher, of Laurel, for $5,000 each for loss of an eye and fracture of both legs in an automobile accident on Baltimore pike, November 18, 1937.

Mrs. Rorabacher was absolved of blame. Miss Gray was injured in a collision in which Mrs. Rorabacher, whose passenger she was, also was injured. She claimed one leg was permanently disabled.

Single Political Party Is Likely For Japan

Tokyo, Oct. 21 (AP).—The possibility that Japan soon would have a single political party loomed large today. Political leaders have agreed upon preliminary steps, but the attitude of the army and navy remains to be determined.

Proponents of the plan are said to regard it as necessary in order to facilitate the solution of various national problems that will arise "with the fall of Canton and Hankow." Observers express doubt that it means dictatorship.

Chain and Tree Jails Ruled Out in Okla.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 21 (AP).—The boom town of Disney is going to have to stop substituting a tree, a chain and a padlock for a jail, Mrs. Mabel Bassett, State commissioner of charities and corrections, declared today.

"They have no place to keep prisoners," said Mrs. Bassett, who investigated the situation. "They chain them to a tree. Last week they chained an intoxicated woman to the tree. She didn't like it and I don't blame her. They have chained men there in the past."

with Chvalkovsky at the foreign office shortly after Premier Jan Syrovy called upon the four powers of the Munich accord to act without delay in guaranteeing Czechoslovakia's new frontiers, now that the Czechs have made "heavy sacrifices" to preserve European peace.

The one-eyed World War hero, in an interview with newspapermen, said that the republic is determined to cultivate friendly relations with Germany and her other neighbors but added that this new friendship must be built upon the integrity of the new frontiers.

He disclosed that a system of labor camps will be inaugurated officially tomorrow to care for thousands of refugees pouring in from the Sudetenland and other surrendered areas and that "in them the workers of the nation will find refuge."

Czechs Massing Troops

Uzhorod, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 21 (AP).—This Ruthenian capital, with a large Hungarian population, was the center tonight of one of the largest concentrations of Czechoslovak troops since the general mobilization last month.

All railways, bridges, railroad crossings and strategic communications centers were guarded by soldiers with fixed bayonets.

In Ruthenia—center of the territorial dispute between Czechoslovakia and Hungary—17 districts but not Uznorod itself are under martial law.

Trucks, covered wagons and even ox-carts steadily moved troops into the area tonight. Apparently they were prepared to resist any forcible attempt to wrest Ruthenia from Czechoslovakia.

first entered Canton had driven 125 miles inland from Bias Bay, to the southeast, circling to assault the city from the north. So easy was the movement, officers said, that the column lost not more than 200 killed and wounded.

At this comparatively trifling cost the invaders took a city which for centuries was the principal seat of South China culture and commerce and the seat of the new revolutionary, anti-Japanese, nationalistic doctrine which brought birth of the Chinese republic in 1912.

Mines Flood Yangtze

Shanghai, Oct. 21 (AP).—Chinese sent a flood of floating mines down the Yangtze River today in an attempt to hold off Japanese gunboats pushing rapidly toward Hankow, provincial capital and objective of the central China campaign.

The United States gunboat Monocacy, stationed near Kiukiang, narrowly escaped collision with one of the mines, which lodged at the shore a short distance from her anchorage. The Monocacy shifted quickly out of the danger zone.

Japanese said that, despite the oncoming mines, increasing numbers of gunboats were continuing the thrust toward Hankow. Their guns, in support of land forces, swept the shorelines some 35 miles downstream from the city.

British Gather Army to March Against Arabs

Troops Are Reinforced Will Sweep Wide Area Jerusalem Is Pacified

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, Oct. 21.—Reinforced British troops tonight were preparing for a southward march to sweep the countryside of marauding Arab rebels while this pacified city looked forward to a new era of peace under civil government.

Reports persisted Jewish immigration to Palestine would be greatly curtailed or stopped entirely. There was a belief in responsible quarters that Britain definitely had scrapped proposals to divide the Holy Land, and would continue for some years at least to keep general control.

British Soldier Killed

Last August a British technical commission completed its study of a proposed partition of Palestine, but its recommendations have not been made public. The commission was assigned the job of drawing up boundaries of suggested Arab and Jewish states.

Jerusalem itself was comparatively quiet today. A British soldier was killed by a sniper, however, and picked squads of British troops with tear gas entered the labyrinth caves of King Solomon's quarries under the old city to drive out Arab rebels. After several hours underground, where they guided themselves by white ropes, the troops emerged empty handed.

Campaign preparations of the British, augmented by new troops from Malta, Egypt, England and India, were spurred by fresh Arab raids against railroads, telegraph and police stations, postoffices and banks.

New Solution Discussed

There was general expectation here tonight that Britain would set up Arab and Jewish administrations of Arab and Jewish areas, respectively, but retain a strong central rule over all, with the British central administration assisted by a legislative council of Moslems, Christians and Jews in proportion to their population.

Britain was expected to seek a permanent solution in a larger political and territorial framework such as would be offered by union of Syria, Trans-Jordan and Palestine. This union would involve cooperation of Turkey, Egypt and neighboring Arab states with the French and British governments.

Oil Shippers Repudiate Views Of Counsel

The Petroleum Rail Shippers Association said yesterday if J. F. Lawrence, who served as counsel for the association in an Interstate Commerce Commission case, appears as a witness in the Government's monopoly investigation hearings, any views he expresses will be his own, and not those of the association.

The association referred to a news article which named Lawrence, "counsel, Mid-Continental Rail Shippers Association," as among those suggested to testify in a study of the oil industry.

The association said it "has nothing whatever to do with divorcement of pipe lines, divorcement of marketings or investigation of patent holding companies in the oil industry," referred to in the article. "The organization was formed for no other purpose than to secure equal transportation costs on all common carrier transportation agencies."

San Francisco, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—The Association of San Francisco Distributors have unanimously ratified an agreement with the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union providing for immediate reopening of more than 135 warehouses closed from one to four months in a contract dispute.

It was expected the warehouses would reopen Monday and that groceries, drugs, packaged liquor, paper goods, hardware and other materials would start flowing to restock depleted retail stocks.

Military Power Growing To Be Ready in 5 Years Innitzer Is Warned

By the Associated Press.

Hamburg, Germany, Oct. 21.—Propaganda Minister Goebbels asserted tonight that Nazi Germany, strengthened by territorial gains, would become one of the world's strongest military powers within five years.

Goebbels, in a long discourse on Nazi accomplishments, took occasion to refer to the church tension in Vienna and warned Cardinal Innitzer (Archbishop of Vienna) that he was "playing with fire."

Goebbels, speaking at a Nazi demonstration here, said:

"At a time when the German army was marching into Sudetenland, it was impudence that Cardinal Innitzer started a political counter-demonstration, that he held a sermon in the cathedral and that the Catholic sheep called out on Cathedral Square: 'Christ is our Fuehrer—Innitzer, command—we follow.'"

"That is frivolous play with fire," the Nazi spokesman continued. "And when on another day National Socialistic Vienna gave its answer and a few windows were smashed (referring to the riot October 8), an appeal was made to the National Socialist Movement.

". . . If a fight with the National Socialist state is wanted, then step forward. We haven't done the church any harm—and never had intention to do so."

Paris, Oct. 21 (AP).—The French government today planned reinforcement of air defenses and weighed possibilities of a "declaration of peace" with Germany.

Air Minister Guy La Chambre and Labor Minister Charles Pomaret decided on vast personnel increases in the airplane industry to permit production of 5,000 planes and 12,000 motors in the next two years.

Attorney Forces Action
Habeas Corpus Sought

Fighting bitterly to keep suppressed John S. Farnsworth' story of his plot to sell American war secrets to Japan, the former Navy officer's lawyer yesterday held up a Federal court hearing until Justice Luhring ordered the public barred from the room.

The Government had summoned Farnsworth's previous counsel to dispute his claim that he was coerced into making the plea which caused him to be sentenced to Atlanta Penitentiary for conspiracy.

Their lips unsealed by his claims, the attorneys were to be asked what he told them, in professional confidence, about his dealings with the men indicted with him, Commander Yosiyki and Lieut. Comdr. Akira Yamaki.

Parents Were Present

The testimony was authorized by Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood, of Atlanta, before whom Farnsworth is seeking a writ of habeas corpus. Notary Public Lloyd Harkins opened the deposition hearing in the offices of Hart & Dice, court stenographers, yesterday.

George S. Hawke, of Cincinnati, now representing Farnsworth, objected vigorously when newspaper reporters entered the hearing room, where Farnsworth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frew W. Farnsworth, already were auditors.

"I have decided that there will be no reporters allowed," he said.

Assistant District Attorney Fihelly, counsel for the Government, said he did not object to an open hearing. He insisted that if Hawke excluded the news men he give a stipulation waiving any rights Farnsworth might have to an "open and public" hearing as guaranteed by the Constitution. Hawke acceded and Harkins asked the auditors to "withdraw temporarily."

Deputy United States Marshal Robert L. Bonham then testified about what was said to Farnsworth in his presence while the office was waiting to be tried for conspiring with the alien officers. Next was called William J. Hughes, jr., who was associated with William E. Leahy as counsel to Farnsworth.

Hughes testified until Dillard Stokes, a Post reporter, entered and explained that he proposed to attend the hearing "unless excluded in a lawful manner and upon sufficient authority."

Luhring Grants Secrecy

For more than half an hour the lawyers and Harkins discussed the question, Hawke once declaring that if the revelations were "to be made public at this stage, we won't go on." Harkins finally ruled that there was no law or rule under which he could exclude the public. Hawke then asked to adjourn the hearing and went to District Court where he filed an action for a star-chamber order.

Justice Luhring held that under new rules of Federal procedure such a hearing could be kept secret and prepared an order to that effect.

With its secrecy thus judicially assured, the hearing was resumed late in the afternoon.

Testifying beside Hughes were Leahy and Mrs. Caroline Wimsatt Riley, once secretary to Hughes.

The hearing will be resumed at 10 a. m. today for testimony by former District Attorney Garnett and former Assistant District Attorney Beach.

Farnsworth was sentenced to 4 to 12 years in prison upon a plea of nolo contendere, (no defense), without a plea of guilty. After he made the plea he dismissed his attorneys and acted as his own counsel in an attempt to withdraw it before Justice Proctor.

He made the same claim then that he did before Judge Underwood, that he was coerced by his family, friends and counsel into making the plea. After hearing witnesses, including several of those summoned yesterday, Justice Proctor found that Farnsworth was not coerced and refused to allow him to withdraw the plea.

Pretender Flies Into France to Read Manifesto

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 21.—The 30-year-old Count of Paris, who would be crown prince if France were a monarchy, flew into France today in violation of the law, read a manifesto urging restoration of the king, then soared into the air toward his home in Belgium.

The count's father is the Duke of Guise, 64-year-old bearded pretender to the throne, worth about $20,000,000. It has long been understood among royalists that if the duke should return to France as king he would abdicate in favor of his son.

Some 20 newspaper reporters met the count at a country estate 40 miles outside Paris. They were taken to the rendezvous in automobiles by royalists who had promised the Countess of Paris would read them a proclamation. When the count appeared after their two-hour drive he smilingly apologized for the subterfuge. After reading his manifesto he served champagne, offering the toast, "To the restoration of France!"

Then he shook hands with the reporters, who represented newspapers of all shades of political policy. The reporters were held virtual prisoners for two hours after the count went back to the controls of his own plane. His round trip by air was approximately 200 miles.

This was the first time on record the prince has set foot on French soil. He ran the risk of immediate arrest.

Time was when such an exploit would have been generally laughed at in France, but today, with France in economic and diplomatic troubles, there were serious aspects to the flight.

Many Frenchmen were puzzled by the fact that the semiofficial Havas New Agency published the manifesto. Some extreme rightists went so far to say that perhaps the government of Premier Daladier might not have opposed the count's act.

The manifesto argued that a republican form of government has proved powerless and referred to the "defeat" of France at the Munich conference on Czechoslovakia as proof that a new form of rule was needed.

Dean of St. Paul's, Here, Says Munich Pact Relieved British

Optimism 'Modified'
Church Open to Raids
English Policy Upheld

"Profound relief and modified optimism"—that is the British reaction to the four-power settlement of the Sudeten question achieved at Munich, as summed up yesterday by the Very Rev. Walter Robert Matthews, dean of St. Paul's Cathedral in London. Dean Matthews is visiting here.

The 57-year-old cleric, who remained at his post throughout the crisis and sailed for America only two weeks ago, said that "Chamberlain would have won an overwhelming majority if a general election had been held right after the Munich agreement."

Dean Matthews spoke with feeling of the throngs praying for peace in St. Paul's at the height of the tension. "The most encouraging aspect of the whole situation," he said, "was the deep desire for peace evidenced by the peope of all countries."

St. Paul's is so vast, he explained, "there wasn't much point" in trying to protect the structure with sandbags against possible aerial bombardment. During the blackest hours of late September, however, he did supervise arrangements for evacuating the cathedral choirboys from London in case of war.

"As far as any great city can be protected from attack from the air," London's anti-aircraft defenses are "adequate," the clergyman said. He declared that British public opinion "would not countenance such an attack on Berlin," adding, "at least we wouldn't start it."

Dean Matthews said he believed "Americans sometimes overlook the fact that England had no more obligation to defend Czechoslovakia than the United States."

British policy in the crisis, he said, "serves as a lesson in democracy. You can't get a democracy to fight unless it is convinced the issue is of absolutely vital importnace to it."

Flat refusal to fight under any circumstances, as advocated by George Lansbury and other British leaders, still represents the position of an important minority, he observed, but questioned "how long that feeling would stand up against a real national emergency."

Dean Matthews and his wife are week-end guests at the home of Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, 2408 Massachusetts avenue northwest. He spoke last night to students of the Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria and is to preach tomorrow at Washington Cathedral. He will lecture at Yale and Harvard before returning to England in mid-November.

Deanna Durbin Still Charms At Keith's

Picture Held Over
Has Star Cast
Story of Youth

Leaping gracefully from the little-girl stage to the age of high school beaus is quite a trick, but Deanna Durbin does it with perfect grace. So naturally that "That Certain Age" is being held over at Keith's.

That frequent phenomenon of sub-deb life—the crush on an attractive older man, funny to outsiders, terrific to the girl, embarrassing to the crush-ee—furnishes forth the story. The high school beau is a more or less distressed onlooker, his troubles being complicated by an accidental pick-up of Deanna's "dear diary" notations. Altogether it's a taking and bright little story, just grazing the edge of seriousness.

The little Durbin is burgeoning into a lovely young lady, but she still remains essentially the little girl. Let's hope that she remains at this stage indefinitely, wavering for seasons at that point "where the brook and river meet."

Surrounded by Star Cast

A cluster of Hollywood's best players surround the young girl star. Jackie Cooper, boyish and manly at the same time, portrays the boy friend driven slightly nuts by Deanna's emotional curlicues. Melvyn Douglas is handsome enough to inspire a first schoolgirl crush, also his acting has the light touch needed for such a role. John Halliday plays Deanna's father, publisher of a chain of newspapers, with his customary near flair for all the possibilities of a role. Irene Rich, once a big star in her own right, is Deanna's mother. Nancy Carroll, ditto to Miss Rich, is Douglas' real girl friend who turns up in the nick of time to help out in the wholesome disillusion of Deanna's dreams. Jackie Searle is seen briefly as the member of a youthful theater group. That cunning little tyke, Juanita Quigley, contrives to tangle the story whenever it seems to be running too smoothly; proves herself a natural baby actress. It's quite a cast, any way you look at it.

Deanna's songs, pretty and catchy, still do not include any possibly hit numbers. "You're as Pretty as a Picture" and "My Own" are probably the best of the group. Little Diva Durbin really rates more exciting music. Her two operatic arias, of course, are sung with a maturity of voice and manner vastly beyond her years.

Mickey Mouse returns to his own as the central hero in "The Brave Little Tailor." It's all about that little tailor who, you'll recall, killed seven (flies) at a blow. This big reputation results in Mickey being drafted to lay low a giant who's spreading havoc in the neighborhood. Mickey is swallowed by the giant, but comes up with a hiccup, is again a part of a cigarette that the giant makes from a haystack. But Mickey literally sews up the giant and wins the hand of Minnie Mouse, who pops up as the king's daughter. It's among the best Disneys, but we did miss Donald Duck.

The newsreel gives flashes of the too many exciting events that are taking place all over the world, ranging from the Orient to Broadway in an inclusive view of what's happening. M. H.

Belasco

As powerful as one of his famed father's paintings is delicate—and quite as much a work of art in its own sphere—is Jean Renoir's film, "Grand Illusion," now continuing at the Belasco. To see it is an event.

The French director has written his own story, a two-fold narrative of war prisoners in an enemy camp. The earlier part of the film is devoted to the relationship of two enemy career officers, played by Pierre Fresnay and Eric von Stroheim. They understand one another, the former appreciating allowances made him as a career officer and the latter realizing that the world both knew in their official status is fading in this "grand illusion" of war. The latter half of the picture develops the escape adventures of two non-ranking men. Their puzzled boredom and ultimate escape lead them to the care of an enemy widow, forming a tender relationship revealing the stupidity of war.

To list all the fine moments in this arresting film would be aimless. Jean Gabin's deeply understanding portrayal of one of the prisoners is a performance seldom achieved. Pierre Fresnay, as the Gallic blueblood, by careful detail builds up a strangely vital figure, and Eric von Stroheim makes a fascinating return as the weary general in charge of the prisoners. A new, refreshing sensation to this pair of eyes is Dita Parlo, wondrously beautiful as the peasant woman who loves an enemy who can't speak her language.

One can only regret that a somewhat timid spirit on the part of many moviegoers toward foreign-made films in general and foreign-language pictures in particular can keep them from so fine a picture. Consistent as has been attendance in the picture's first week, certain it is that many will miss this genuinely superior film for fear of not understanding the dialogue—which, incidentally, slides from French to English to German with surprising affect. They forget, however, that the moving picture is primarily a medium of pantomime. And as a moving picture, "Grand Illusion" boasts not only superb pantomime, but vital interest, deep feeling and thrilling suspense. R. L. C.

"SING, YOU SINNERS." Paramount picturization of a stage and screen play by Claude Binyon, with music and lyrics by Hoagy Carmichael & Frank Loesser and James V. Monaco & John Burke, starring Bing Crosby, with Fred MacMurray, Donald O'Connor, Elizabeth Patterson, Ellen Drew, John Gallaudet, William Haade, Paul White, Irving Bacon, Tom Dugan and Herbert Corthell. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Previewed Tuesday, October 11. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

If Mr. Zukor and his Paramount executives have it tucked away anywhere in the back of their minds to inaugurate a series of screen plays based on the experiences of an interesting and talented family—like the Judge Hardy family at M.-G.-M., or the Jones family at Twentieth Century-Fox — Mrs. Beebe and her three sons and daughter-in-law would make a fine place to begin.

BELL.

These Beebes, as they reveal themselves on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater this week, in "Sing, You Sinners," are a slightly berserk lot, but they are pretty nice, down-to-earth people, at that, and will rivet any audience's attention during the entire time they are working out their peculiar destiny. Mrs. Beebe is a patient and homey soul, spending most of her time over the cook stove, wondering whether or not the family will eat on the morrow, and, if so, how the food will get itself paid for without ruining David's prospect of ever marrying Martha. David is a hard-working lad, trying to figure out the complex matter of how two families can be supported on an income that isn't enough for one. Joe Beebe is the lazy roustabout of the household, intent on swapping anything he owns for whatever he can get for it, so long as it isn't a job. Little Mike is the kid of the family—and what a kid! Martha is a nice girl, as patient as Mrs. Beebe, in the face of every impediment to her happiness, and not half so much worried.

Joe Is Put on Spot

It happens that Joe, David and Mike can do a nice job of close harmony singing, with a little instrumental "swing" tossed in on the side, and pick up a bit of extra money that way. But that isn't good enough for Joe. He always has the "big deal" just beyond his grasp. But finally he begins to get a glimmering of what a no-good guy he is and strikes out for Los Angeles from the little home town. He seems to be doing all right there, with his "Swapshop," until some one offers to trade him a dubious race horse for it. It is too late to head off the family, about to join him, so he and Mike do the best they can with the oat burner—which turns out to be fairly well, until a gang of crooked gamblers beat up all of the male Beebes and convince Ma Beebe that it is time for her to run the family. This she proceeds to do by hurling the title of the picture at her boys and bringing everything out right side up when they go back to work as entertainers at the Ship Cafe.

Whether this sketchy outline indicates it or not, "Sing You Sinners" is the best picture Bing Crosby—he is the Joe of the family—has had in many months. He sings, to be sure, but not as much as usual. The film is his best of recent vintage because it permits him to play himself in an unpretentious role and "himself" is one of the people he can play best. Fred MacMurray is the David and brings into play all of the experience he had had as a singing saxophonist before entering pictures. And this little Mike shaver is impersonated like a million dollars by Donald O'Connor, a kid who seems to have everything. He sings, dances, strums a "uke" and lends complete naturalness to his character. Elizabeth Patterson is practically perfect as Mrs. Beebe and Ellen Drew discloses here the performance that won her the assignment opposite Ronald Colman in "If I Were King."

Support and Stage Bill Excel

The others in the cast are strictly secondary, but among them are such names as John Gallaudet, Irving Bacon and Tom Dugan. The songs are in Crosby's best vein. "Small Fry," written for this picture, takes on new meaning as sung by the star, MacMurray and Master O'Connor.

The stage bill this week bristles with "names," too. Headlining the vaudeville program are the Kidoodlers, brought over from radio, with their conglomeration of toy instruments and excellent voices, and matching them in superlative artistry is Marjorie Gainsworth, a brilliant coloratura soprano, whose repertoire ranges from jitterbug classics to the better arias from grand opera. Others on the bill are the Three Swifts, those familiar Indian club jugglers, and Pritchard and Lord, ballroom dancers de luxe, who combine taps with ballet in surprising fashion. The Chester Hale Capitol Dancers are out in front with some splendid precision routines and novelty effects.

Phil Lampkin's operatic medley overture, a new issue of "The Magic Carpet" and the Fox Movietone News complete a top-hole entertainment.

"THE GARDEN OF THE MOON." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by N. Bedford Jones and Barton Browne, adapted to the screen by Jerry Wald and Richard Macauley, featuring Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay and John Payne, with Johnnie Davis, Melville Cooper, Isabel Jeans, Mabel Todd, Penny Singleton, Dick Purcell, Curt Bois, Granville Bates, Edward McWade, Larry Williams and Jimmie Fidler. Directed by Busby Berkeley. Reviewed Friday morning, at the Earle Theater.

For quick identification of the general character of this extravagant opus, it had better be set down at once that it is in the nature of a hybrid composite of "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Cocoanut Grove" and any picture you happen to think of that involves radio and an interrupted broadcast—"Kentucky Moonshine," maybe.

The story hinges upon the experiences of a young band leader who has "wowed" 'em in the Eastern beer joints and back street dance halls, when he is booked into the Garden of the Moon night spot on the West Coast to substitute for Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees. The Garden of the Moon is operated as an adjunct to a swanky hotel under the management of the world's greatest four-flusher and doublecrosser, who has a feminine press agent with a heart made out of something besides ice cubes and granite. When Don Vincente and all his lads arrive on the Coast, the pitched battle between the leader and John Quinn, the night club big shot, begins with a two-weeks' notice of their cancelation. From that point on, the screen play takes on all of the high-pressure aspects of a knife-throwing act up a dark alley. It is a pretty war of wits, witticisms and wacky situations, heavily sprinkled with jitterbug music and a ballad or two, dripping with saccharine sentiment.

To War! To War!

There isn't much in "The Garden of the Moon" that can be taken seriously—if it ever was intended to be—even by flippant minds. It is a "gag" story, if you know what I mean, with the battle lines eventually extended to include Jimmie Fidler, well-known columnist and radio commentator, who allies himself with the comparatively sane forces who deem Quinn king of the rats. Mr. Fidler gets into the thick of it, despite the fact that he is not so good an actor as some of the other columnists of national reputation who have dared to face the cameras.

The piece is played for all it is worth—and that wouldn't be too much—by a cast that is worthy of better material and saner stories. Pat O'Brien, as he always does, "gives his all" to the role of Quinn, but even so generous an all as his isn't quite enough to make the character either credible or likable. It is probably the most distasteful part in which Pat ever has appeared. Margaret Lindsay is the distaff publicity expert, who falls in love with her boss' pet antipathy, and John Payne, a personable young fellow with a strident voice, contrives to make Vincente the most sympathetic figure in the play, as the persecuted underdog. These principals are supported by an able group of mimes and instrumentalists who, likewise, deserve better opportunities—Melville Cooper, Isabel Jeans, Dick Purcell, Granville Bates and Edward McWade, for example.

The orchestral and individual musical specialties are put over in the grand jitterbug manner by Johnny Davis, Jerry Colonna, Joe Venuti and Mr. Payne. Johnny Davis, recently at the Earle in person, with Wayne Morris, toots his trumpet and portrays his role with an apoplectic enthusiasm that promises to blast the top of his head off, but never does.

The picture does have its moments, of course, but falls just this side of making any very comprehensible sense. It has been handsomely mounted and photographed with all of the artistic tricks necessary to make the Garden of the Moon appear to be, in fact, the most famous night club in the world.

Stroud Twins Win

The stage bill begins in the orchestra pit, where the Six Continentals group about Jo Lombardi's conductor's stand and sing tuneful glees back at the audience. It then moves up onto the rostrum to greet the 16 Earle Roxyettes in a colorful routine that is interrupted by the Five Juggling Jewels, a quintet of feminine Indian club experts who end their act spectacularly on a darkened stage with illustrated clubs. Reynolds and White, that tramp musical act with the surprise finish, wins attention and applause with deceptive tricks already familiar to Washington. And then come the Stroud Twins.

Clarence and Claude Stroud also were known to Capital theatergoers before they joined that Sunday night coffee hour on the Coast with Charlie McCarthy and Don Ameche. Their tour of duty there has enhanced their popularity here and as the week's headliners they easily walk off with the show. Well, perhaps not easily, but still they walk off with it. Badinage, dancing and burlesque gymnastics are their forte--especially badinage.

Through all of this the Continentals and the Roxyettes are ambling in and out, each time with something new to do. The girls' finale on stilts is as hazardous as their tricky business on those big rolling globes a few weeks ago.

The Paramount News for what is left.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 21.—Tyrone Power has done it againin in "Suez." At 24, he gives his finest performance as the dreamer who had a made idea and made it come true. After 25 years directing, Alan Dwan proved again he is one of our greatest. The picture has suspense, beauty, thrills, drama, magnificent performances, and, thank heaven, here's an epic with a story and not just a lot of ipecac.

HEDDA HOPPER

Loretta Young was exquisite as Eugenie. My one complaint is that somebody should have cut off those long nails of hers, even if they had to use a buzzz-saw. She should get a slap for that. They're bad enough with modern dress, but with those lovelye costumes — which weren't exaggerated—they were ridiculous.

Edward J. Bomberg, as Prince Said, and Miles Mander, as Disraeli, led a cast as distinguished as any we've had on the screen in ages. "Suez" is what I call a picture, and makes those flying banners come true.

I lunched with Rosita Moreno, recently back from South America, where she's become their favorite screen star. Her acclaim down there is greater than we give Hedy La Marr here, and boy, that's acclaim! Dark, luscious and a swell actress. But Hollywood passes her by. Why?

Down there, Myrna Loy and Gary Cooper come first, with Paul Muni crowding them for first place. The South Americans didn't like Bob Taylor till they saw him in "Yank at Oxford." They wear little Charlie McCarthys in their coat lapels, hats—any place they can stick him, and think he's cute but don't know it.

Wonder what Jack Barrymore's going to do without his blackboards when he returns to the stage? Answer: His ad-libbing will be funnier than the author's lines. The same audience will keep coming back, because they'll get a new play each performance.

Poor Lucille Ball, who got into hr stride in "Stage Door," is now bedded down. During making of "Trailer Romance" they put a hose through the window of the trailer and Lucille got full force of water up her nose. The old sin, sinus, settled.

With memberships selling for $1,000 each for Earl Carroll's night club, which is going up—and I mean up—this will be his third time at bat in exclusive night-clubbing.

Let's hope this won't make it three times and out. Cameramen are to be barred. What do people go to night clubs for? What put over El Morocco? What did Elsa Maxwell send for when her first party was laying an egg? Candid camera boys, silly. They're more important than floor shows, food or champagne baths.

Universal has had so many requests for pictures of Deanna Durbin's dog that Tipy had a portrait sitting with and without his mistress.

The hardest job of the week went to Manuel del Campo, cutter at Metro, who had to snip ten close-ups of his wife, Mary Astor, out of "Listen, Darling." He kissed them good-by before they reached the cutting-room floor.

Allan Joslyn, not Alex Woollcott, will do keyhole chatterbox in "Cafe Society" at Paramount.

Bob Hope's known as an egg hatching comic. When it's a bad joke it means an egg. To put it over he hatches it with another joke. Bob says, "It's not the lines on a comedian's face that tells his age, but the ones which pop from his mouth."

Those who thought it wasn't dignified for Gladys Swarthout to be doing "Ambush," a nonselling picture, are in for a surprise. She lets go and really acts in this. And lo, and behold, that canary, Jan Kiepura, who costarred with her a couple of years back to their mutual distaste and disadvantage, will be warbling here at a concert this winter. We may not like to hear it, but he stopped 'em cold at the Metropolitan last year.

Sorry to hear of Annabella's divorce from Jean Murat. When he came here unexpectedly some months ago, she ran home from a beauty shop with her hair soaking wet to greet him. Wonder if Tyrone Power was mixed up in her cry for freedom?

Speaking of freedom, Ros Russell is to do "Let Freedom Ring" with Nelson Eddy. She'll probably come out singing. I know one who did and she only went with him two months.

Notable for its shots of crashing icebergs and quaint miscasting of good actors is "Spawn of the North." George Raft and Akim Tamiroff are in fine fettle as pirating fishermen in Alaskan waters and Henry Fonda as the law-and-order hero, with his fiancee, Louise Platt, is flat. Which is bad, for there is scarcely anyone we are fonder of than Fonda in a suitable part.

Dorothy Lamour, sans sarong, is still good for your money. With Raft as teammate, she clicks. John Barrymore as a soused editor is above par. So are all the other names which stud the cast.

For lovers of adventure, this saga of the salmon run and the men who make Alaska safe for dimorous fishermen, is prescribed. You may discount the scurrilous rumor the whole thing was subsidized by the canned salmon industry.

Starring honors go to Slicker, a trained seal.

The Captain and the Kids, longtime features of the comic pages, appear in a diverting animated cartoon. The newsclip has shots of the Chinese women's Death Battalion. Ralph Byrd as Dick Tracy extricates himself from a whole new set of difficult situations.

Check it as O. K. for the family, all of it. S. S.

Metropolitan

The Vanderhofs and the Kirbys are still at it.

The feud between these two estimable families of opposite ends of the social scale and opposing views with regard to a worthy philosophy of life, as disclosed in Frank Capra's film version of "You Can't Take It With You," yesterday entered the second week of its repeat engagement at the Metropolitan Theater, and its fourth in downtown Washington.

It is highly fitting that this picturization of the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart Pulitzer Prize play of 1937 should be the film to be accorded such voluminous public appreciation and support. It is one of the most satisfying screen entertainments ever made. It abounds in humor, engrossing action, deft characterization and the priceless elements of suspense and surprise.

It is enacted by one of the most notable casts assembled in recent seasons, led by Lionel Barrymore, Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Edward Arnold, Mischa Auer, Spring Byington, Donald Meek, Halliwell Hobbes, Samuel S. Hinds, H. B. Warner, Ann Miller, Mary Forbes and literally scores more.

Nothing remains to be said beyond what already has been written. Something remains to be done, however, if you have not seen it.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 21.

SAMUEL SEABURY: Russell T. Sherwood, the accountant who fled this jurisdiction during your investigation, is visiting New York—but on Sundays . . . Police Commissioner Valentine: A Fifty-second street entertainer—who is notorious for slugging women—has been picked up by your police in connection with the knifing outside the Swing Club . . . Senator Wagner: On October 25 Al Smith will make a political broadcast. He won't mention any candidate. He'll discuss the proposed amendments and speak in favor of all except reapportionment . . . Grand Duchess Marie: Prince George of Russia has been removed to Post-Graduate Hospital.

WILLIAM BRAY: Gov. Lehman was not the one who first suggested that you be dropped from the Democratic State ticket. Jim Farley suggested it, in favor off Lee, the upstater. Lehman then agreed to be a candidate, with Poletti as his running mate . . . Marc Connelly: Richard Haydn, the man who imitates a fish and whom you discovered in London, will be in the new Noel Coward-Bea Lillie show. It will open here December 26 . . . A. C. Blumenthal: Your wife, Peggy Fears, heard of her mother's death and flew to Dallas. Her friend, Lupe Velez, is volunteering to substitute for Peggy at El Rio if the Shuberts give their consent.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK: The Hearst papers, contrary to its yellow menace policy, plans to publish six pro-Japanese articles—probably as an anti-Communist gesture . . . Mischa Elman: Fritz Kreisler now isn't averse to accepting radio offers, but he wants $30,000.

PRESS PHOTOGRAPHERS ASSOCIATION: Last year John Jacob Astor paid $10 to all news cameramen who photographed him, in return for the picture and the negative. Astor now saves expenses. He merely lowers his head, hides his face, and so makes the picture useless . . . Harry Hopkins: "Sing for Your Supper," the Federal Theater revue which has been in rehearsal more than a year, has an advance sale of over 80,000 tickets to labor organizations, etc. . . . Book-of-the-Month Club: Sinclair Lewis finally has helped, in the book written by his son, Wells Lewis. He furnished the title—which will be "They Still Say No."

HENRY LUCE: The directors of the March of Time radio program reconsidered and yesterday decided to continue the series of broadcasts . . . Jeff Davis: The Hobo News hired a press agent last night. He's Tom Collinge, who pressagented the Algonquin and the Coq Rouge . . . Cecil Beaton: Schall and Nyholm did those Vogue photos of the Windsors' home. Vogue just refuses to use any more of your photos . . . Gerardo Machado: While you were doing that rhumba with Carito, at the Havana-Madrid, that man at whom you stared once had pledged allegiance to you. He heads the Cuban cavalry unit which came here for the horse show.

MRS. JAY CARLISLE: You introduced Patricia "Honeychile" Wilder to your former husband, Tommy Manville, yesterday. He immediately rushed her to Hattie Carnegie's, bought her a herd of fox capes and took them along—unlined . . . Miss Wilder then went to the 21 Club, where she had a dinner date with one of the regulars—who there threatened to slug her . . . Patricia then met Tommy again, they sent for two detectives from the Fifty-first street station and the quartet toured the night spots . . . And at the Stork Club, five hours after he met her, Tommy announced: "We're engaged. Honeychile will be my fifth wife. So I'll pay 200 grand more, in alimony. So what?"

MAXWELL ANDERSON: I had a grand time seeing "Knickerbocker Holiday" last night. I hope it runs a year . . . Arturo Toscanini: America's largest retail store has become interested in sponsoring this season's Sunday afternoon broadcasts of the New York Pilharmonic . . . Dale Carnegie: Dorothy Parker met Mrs. Lincoln Steffens, who is very British, and immediately dropped the Americanisms from her speech. "Whenever I meet a Britisher," she explained, "I feel like I have a papoose on my back."

JIMMY CROMWELL: Your wife, Doris Duke, offered to back the Persian exhibit at the World's Fair . . . Thomas Bull, the decorater, is designing the place. The Persian officials decided, however, to back it themselves and to place on exhibit the Shah of Persia's jewels.

Palace

An American boy's adventure dream of the wildest sort seems to be what MGM had in mind when it whipped out the fast, furious and completely incredible "Too Hot to Handle," now in its second week at Loew's Palace Theater.

Laurence Stallings has written the screen play of a newsreel cameraman's adventures from celluloid grinding in the Chinese War to a chilling rescue from a tribe of Amazonian savages. Just how the innocent audience is yanked from the Chinese War and picture-faking to Manhattan and a harum-scarum press, and then to the rescue of a charming lady flier's explorer-brother, is more than Director Conway himself could explain. Nevertheless, by a breathless never-stop-for-a-coke method, the most adult and serial-weaned audience is ripped and rattled by co-stars Clark Gable and Myrna Loy through this unbelieveable chain of adventures. It's quite the sort of life you pictured yourself dashing into when you were 12 years old, trying to get to sleep the day before school opened.

Vital to the success of these nerve-jangling junkets from one continent to a couple of others is the cool-headed bravura of Mr. Gable. Whether dripping Oriental mud or flashing newsreel shots of Niagara on a screen of Amazonian foliage as a purge to voodooism, Mr. Gable is so resourceful that you begin to think that since he was so far-sighted as to have the Niagara four-days paddle up the Amazon from headquarters, mayhap he could get the MGM lion to explain how voodooism got down as far as South America, anyway!

Completing the "Test Pilot" duo is Myrna Loy as a brilliant aviatrix flying the precious serum, daringly taking dips over a vessel filled with dynamite about to explode 60 miles out at sea (Don't interrupt!) and demurely wondering why Mr. Gable kissed her; it's one of those straight from the lip lassies whom Miss Loy plays to something not quite up to her own inimitable zenith. Walter Pidgeon is at the wrong camera lens this time but is very proper in his never-give-up-the-shot technique of the true cameraman and Loy lover. Leo Carrillo and Walter Connolly are much in evidence too, the former as Mr. Gable's invaluable assistant and the later as the blustering head of the newsreel concern.

It's a fast moving bill, but leave your credulity at home!

ceived from German agents and of complicated schemes for obtaining military secrets.

None of the schemes was ever carried out, however, except the one to obtain passport blanks, and although Rumrich supplied a certain amount of information and material to his German correspondents none of it appeared to be of any great value, nor did any of it appear to be anything that an ordinary citizen could not acquire in a straightforward way.

"A Sensitive Nature"

Matthews started with Rumrich's decision to come to the United States in 1929. Although he had been brought up in Budapest and in Czechoslovakia, Rumrich was born in Chicago and so was able to exercise an option to become a United States citizen.

Matthews did most of the talking, Rumrich merely affirming his statements. Rumrich had no friends when he first arrived in New York, he said, and had a hard time "to make a go of it," because of his unfamilarity with the language. He joined the Army, but his fellow soldiers ragged him, calling him a foreigner, and, said Matthews, "being of a sensitive nature, you went A. W. O. L."

"Did you ever love your country?" Matthews asked.

"I did," said Rumrich, "when I had mastered its language and could read its literature and books and became better acquainted with the country."

Never Disciplined

Matthews brought out that Rumrich never had to be disciplined in the Army, even for minor infractions of rules, up to the time he left because he found the going too hard, and that after he had been court martialed he served his six months' sentence with good grace.

When he returned to the Army, Rumrich became qualified as laboratory technician at Fort Hamilton in Brooklyn, and was promoted to the rank of sergeant. Then Rumrich was stationed for two years in the Panama Canal Zone, where, he said, he acquired the habit of drinking, because "the climate was very bad and conducive to drinking."

This habit stuck with him when he was transferred to Fort Missoula, Mont., where he was in charge of the hospital mess. There was a shortage in provisions, which Rumrich could not explain because, he said, "I was drinking pretty steadily then."

Tells of Reform

In fear of court martial, Rumrich deserted and came to New York, where, he said, turned over a new leaf and stopped drinking.

"You schemed and pondered how you could get re-established in the Army?" Matthews asked.

"Yes, sir," said Rumrich.

"You evolved a great many plans how that might be done and found that most of them just wouldn't work?"

"Yes, sir."

"Yet you kept trying to make atonement and that thought haunted you night and day?"

Hoped for Money

Eventually, after reading a book on espionage by Col. W. Nicolai, of the German secret service, Rumrich wrote a leteter to Col. Nicolai, offering his services as a spy. This letter led to his correspondence with a Mr. Sanders, in Hamburg, and other German agents. Rumrich said that his primary purpose was to give information to the Government and so get reinstated, but admitted that he hoped to get some money from the German agents, because he was heavily in debt.

The correspondence continued from April, 1937, until Rumrich's arrest last February after his abortive attempt to get blank passports.

"Will you tell me," Matthews answered, "when it was that you thing of value to the German formed the intention of giving any agents?"

Question by Judge

"When I decided to comply with the request for the passports," Rumrich replied.

"And that was the only time when you had the intention of giving the German agents anything of value?"

"What do you think you would have done,'" Judge Knox asked Rumrich, "if you had come across the plans of the Yorktown and Enterprise six months before the passport episode?"

"You mean if I had found them?"

"If they had come into your possession and the German agents had asked you to turn them over."

"I would not have done it."

Federal Alcohol Agent Takes Own Life in Car

Edgefield, S. C., Oct. 21 (AP).—Thomas C. MacMillan, 45, an agent of the Federal Alcohol Tax Unit, was found today slumped in his automobile, dead of a bullet wound in the head. His pistol was clutched in his hand.

Roy L. Cecil, head of the Greenwood office of the Federal Alcohol Tax Unit, said MacMillan had been discharged from a hospital only yesterday after an illness.

Murphy Action In Strikes Held 'Treasonable'

Reds

which would have ejected strikers from Fisher Body plants at Flint.

Barringer, deposed by his own council after the strike for having formed what he called "reserves" and what the council called "vigilantes," said he also was a Republican but that he had voted "both ways." He said flatly that Murphy was "guilty of a treasonable action in not giving us help when we asked for it."

But Barringer also blamed agents of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee as largely responsible for acuteness of the strike situation. Testimony before the Dies Committee several times has been aimed at establishing links between the La Follette committee and communism, or the C. I. O. This occurred after the La Follette agents released sworn statements naming as labor spies a number of Dies' star witnesses.

Barringer asserted that investigators for the La Follette committee had made "implied threats" when he refused to give them the names of the "vigilantes" he had summoned, including numerous American Legion members. He said that the La Follette agents would not assure him that the names of his "trouble troops"—the term given the "reserves" in Michigan—would not be given to strikers.

He said he feared his men would be intimidated.

Lays Riot to Delays

Barringer added:

"It was the attitude of the La Follettee committee and the attitude of Gov. Murphy, which I call treasonable, that built the trouble up to what it was. If there had been any bloodshed, it would have been purely on Gov. Murphy's shoulders."

Judge Gadola described how he had issued an injunction to remove sit-down strikers from two Fisher Body plants in Detroit. While the writ was still being argued, he said, a riot broke out at a Chevrolet Moter Co. plant and seven men died.

He said that Maurice Sugar, former counsel, United Auto Workers; Lee Pressman, chief attorney, C. I. O., and Larry Davidow, also a union attorney, "took possession of my outer office with six bodyguards."

Sugar, said Dadola, talked with Murphy and then demanded that the injunction hearing be adjourned "because the Governor desires it." Gadola rejected this and issued the injunction. He said a number of strikers were cited for contempt for disobeying the order, "but were never apprehended." He added:

"The sheriff, I think, would have attempted to execute the writ, but he was prevented from doing so by the chief executive of the State. Civil authority had completely broken down."

Gadola said his life was threatened "constantly," and that the American Legion had guarded him, while another organization guarded his children at school.

Chairman Dies, of Texas, announced earlier that Homer Martin, president, U. A. W., affiliated with the C. I. O., would not testify until next week because of illness.

Florida Investigates Reds

Tampa, Fla., Oct. 21 (AP).—The Tampa Times said today State Representative Thomas Cooley of Lake County, chairman of a State legislative committee, had revealed the committee is investigating what he termed a "serious Communist situation" in Tampa and that it would begin a series of public hearings here November 1.

The legislator was quoted as saying:

"We have reason to believe Communist influences are trying to get control of the cigar industry and local unions in Tampa and we have received evidence that schools, churches and business houses have been boycotted."

Council Weighs Extension of Security Act

Pensions

tions to the board and the Senate Finance Committee may take.

Several minor extensions of the act were approved by the board and sent to Congress last session, but no action has been taken.

These include:

Removal of the present requirement that a worker's wage credits stop at 65, and provision that credits accumulate as long as he is at work on any job covered by the act.

Extension of the old-age insurance program to seamen and other workers employed on American vessels, originally barred because of tax collection difficulties.

Extension of old-age insurance to employes of national banks, State bank members of the Federal Reserve System and members of the Home Loan Bank System.

The advisory council in addition has recommended extension of benefits to employes of private nonprofit religious, charitable and educational institutions now excluded. At the council's spring conference, it called for board studies of possible inclusion of other large groups of the approximately 16,000,000 now excluded from the act, and progress reports on these studies were presented by the board at yesterday's conference.

The board now has approximately 40,000,000 old-age insurance accounts on its books, and is paying lump-sum claims at the rate of 10 to 15,000 a month to insured workers who have reached 65 and to the families of those who have died. The board estimates that 29 States now are paying out-of-work benefits, 20 more will begin such payments in the next few months,

Fletcher Urges New I. C. C. Rules To Aid Railroads

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 21 (AP).—R. W. Fletcher, vice president and general counsel of the Association of American Railroads, proposed today revision of the I. C. C. rate making rule to aid the Nation's railroads, which he said were in "desperate" condition.

Fletcher said 86.7 per cent of the mileage in the Nation operated at a loss for the first six months of 1938, while the return on investment for the first seven months dropped to 0.84 per cent compared with 2.26 a year ago.

Fitzgerald Hall, president of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway, said the Government has met the railroad problem "largely in a political way."

Moslem Leaders Ask Hull to Keep U. S. Out of 'War'

Arabian and Syrian leaders in the United States, who said they represented 250,000 followers, demanded of Secretary Hull yesterday that this Government keep out of the Palestine conflict.

On behalf of the Arab National League, the American Friends of the Arabs, and various Moslem societies, they presented two letters to Hull, one of which was addressed to the President. Saying "there is an undoubted state of war in Palestine," the leaders asked Hull to request American nationals to "leave the danger zone and to avoid embroiling us in this quarrel."

Hull said in reply the United States had no desire to interfere with the rights of anybody, but that this country was striving to fulfill its full duty with respect to the movement for a Jewish home in Palestine.

WPA In The Limelight

Senator Chavez has no comment to make upon the indictment of a number of his relatives and close associates for conspiracy to violate the WPA laws in New Mexico. "Under our system of jurisprudence," he says, "all persons charged with offenses against the State or Government are presumed to be innocent until proven otherwise." It is a justified source of pride that this is the case. However, when a loosely organized, carelessly administered system of Federal relief makes it easy to exploit the destitute, public opinion does not readily fall into line with this legal presumption.

Both in New Mexico and in New Jersey Federal grand juries have returned indictments against numerous individuals connected with the WPA in an official or private capacity. Some of the defendants are accused of defrauding the Government, and indirectly of course those on relief, for the sake of monetary or political gain. To the credit of the WPA it has co-operated in investigating complaints in these States and has turned over to the grand juries data collected by its agents.

Unfortunately, the punishment of grafters will not bring back sums already dissipated or restore the political tribute collected from victimized WPA workers. The investigations of campaign expenditures in various States by the Sheppard committee raise a strong presumption that the scandals uncovered in New Mexico and New Jersey are duplicated to some extent in various other parts of the country. The sporadic descent of agents of the WPA and the Federal Bureau of Investigation upon communities that have acquired an especially unsavory reputation for maladministration of relief laws is at best only a minor deterrent to offenders elsewhere tempted by the rich booty which the Federal Government has placed within their reach.

While punishment of any individuals convicted of charges of fraud and exploitation of relief workers should be swift and unrelenting, prosecution offers no guarantee that similar abuses will not continue to be perpetrated. What we need is a radical reformation of the relief system involving abolition of the WPA and substitution of decentralized relief agencies under local and Federal supervision. Threats of withdrawal of Federal aid could be effectively employed to compel local administrations to conform to approved standards. Until a thoroughgoing reorganization of this sort is effected, the WPA will continue to be a breeding ground for political corruption and a cause of factional quarrels over political patronage and cash perquisites.

Rising Curtain

Come sun, come rain, come almost anything short of earthquake, this morning is sure to become a bright memory in the lives of many Washington boys and girls. Dozens of them will taste today, for the first time, and never again, perhaps, in such completeness, the sweet illusions of the theater.

These children are more fortunate than many of their elders. They will make their acquaintance with the theater under the aegis of Clare Tree Major's Children's Theater of New York. This company of players is opening its seventh season in Washington under the auspices of the Women's International League. Between now and April, six plays will be presented in the National Theater, beginning with "The Five Little Peppers" and closing with Ruskin's "The King of the Golden River."

One of the most admirable aspects of the Children's Theater is the increasing proportion of poor children among the audiences. This has been made possible through the "Pleasure Fund" subscribed in the main by parents of more fortunate children.

From the standpoint of social value nothing could be sounder. The cultural nurture of a child is surely not less important than his bodily well being. And if "culture" has any meaning at all, it means a common heritage, a common tradition of which most of the tales that have been adapted for the repertory of the Children's Theater are an integral part.

Canton And Munich

The Japanese entry into Canton, less than two weeks after the onset of the first serious drive against this metropolis of South China, should serve to develop a better balance in the American outlook on international affairs. So far as its potential effect on this country is concerned the capture of Canton is a more significant matter than the surrender of Czechoslovakia to German domination.

To say this is not to underestimate the vast importance of the change in central Europe. But the conquest of China by Japan's armies is a matter of very vital concern to a nation for which the Pacific area is as important as is the case with the United States. And, taken together, the simultaneous increase of German power in Europe, of Japanese power in the Far East, foreshadows changes having tremendous implications for this country.

With the capture of Canton every major Chinese port, strung over more than 3,000 miles of coastline, is in Japanese hands. From Siberia to French Indo-China every entrance to the continent of Asia is now dominated by Tokyo. Deep in the interior the troops of Chiang Kai-shek are still resisting the invader. Hankow, though now cut off from supplies and imminently threatened, is still in Chinese hands. But the major Japanese objective of controlling the trade and commerce of China has been achieved. And after military conquest will come economic exploitation.

There is no longer much point in talking about the morality of this development. It should be remembered that for barefaced aggression, for the ruthless subjection of an innocent and inoffensive people, the Japanese war on China is incomparably more of an offense to civilization than Hitler's bloodless annexation of Austria and the Sudeten area. In the quality and quantity of their aggression the Japanese militarists make the Nazis seem relatively dovelike. But that is all beside the immediate point.

The immediate point is that the United States, for the first time in its history, is now suddenly confronted with the emergence of two victorious and unscrupulous imperialisms, alike in their power, energy and military competence, alike in their dictatorial and undemocratic forms of government, alike in their indifference, if not hostility, to what the American people consider the vital elements of civilization. These two imperialisms, moreover, are in alliance with each other and can be counted upon to work co-operatively together.

It is probable that Germany, for years to come, will be occupied with consolidating her position as the dominant power in Europe. It is probable that Japan will be indefinitely engaged in establishing herself as mistress of the Far East. But it is also very possible that the two countries, separately or together, will decide to push their penetrations in the New World. South America offers a rich potential market for their products. And the influence of both Japan and Germany in that continent is steadily growing.

There is nothing to be gained by pointing a lurid alarmist picture of the new era now dawning for the United States. There is, however, much to be lost by failing to recognize the change before its results become inescapably apparent. For very evidently the ostrich tactics of refusing to notice what is happening in the world will serve the United States no longer.

There was a time when if this country wanted isolation it could, theoretically, choose that course without regard to others. There may well come a time when the desire to be isolated, which China possessed in high degree, will be of no avail simply because the policies of others can so easily impinge on us. That is the change foreshadowed by such dramatic and rapidly consecutive developments as the agreements at Munich and the capture of Canton.

Overhauling Taxes

Washington's tax system is undergoing the most thorough scrutiny it has had for many years. Representatives of the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation and the local tax advisory committee have done well to explore the issue in a joint session. If the two groups are able to agree upon a tax program, the chances for its enactment should be notably improved.

In formulating their conclusions the experts must necessarily take into consideration the District's increased expenses. Washington has grown rapidly in recent years. An expanded budget is essential to meet steadily increasing demands for essential community services. Next year's budget is said to have been tentatively estimated at $50,000,000. If the city continues to grow, a gradual boosting of even this high figure may be anticipated. Moreover, the neglect of public health, the schools, the police and other agencies in the past has made increased revenue indispensable.

If the new tax program is to meet community expectations it will not be limited to mere replacement of the inequitable business-privilege tax. That is only one of several unsatisfactory levies now exacted from Washingtonians. There seems to be agreement among tax experts that the real estate levy is too high. The intangible property tax has been generally denounced as being unenforceable as well as inequitable. What the District needs is a new tax system that will eliminate discrimination and spread the burden of financing the local government over a larger field in accord with ability to pay.

Congress can not pass a tax measure, however equitable, that would produce the exact revenue needs of the District year after year. And it is entirely unreasonable to ask that body to pass new local taxes or go through the tedious process of adjusting rates during every session. If the tax system can be modernized so that frequent changes will not be demanded, the simple task of adjusting rates could be left to the Commissioners. In that way flexibility would be attained without the danger of having sound principles of taxation upset every time a slight increase in revenue is needed.

The committees may be tempted to follow the easiest course of leaving established levies undisturbed. Should they do so, however, the task to which they have been assigned soon would have to be done over again. The sooner the entire system is modernized the better, both for the District and for members of Congress who have to struggle with the problem.

The Urge For Security

A country in the position of the United States, where one-third of the people is said to be inadequately fed, clothed and housed, obviously cannot afford to bestow lavish pensions of the kind demanded by the Townsendites and their imitators. It would not take long to demonstrate the utter impracticability of some of the crackbrained schemes concocted by credulous but ignorant would-be reformers and indorsed by vote-seeking politicians. The people would soon learn that public outlays for pensions, like all other governmental expenditures, have to be adjusted to the income of the taxpayers who support the Government.

The growing demand that the State provide noncontributary pensions, not only for the old but for able-bodied persons in early middle age, is a very disturbing development, apart from its disastrous economic connotations. There seems to be an almost panicky desire for security against future want—a security provided not by one's own exertions, but by the state.

A few years ago such a clamor for state aid would have been regarded as an effete un-American trait. The belief that workers should save and support themselves in old age was formerly an almost universal conviction. While a large proportion of wage earners and salaried workers have never earned enough to insure themselves against dependence in their declining years, the fiction that they could do so has been maintained and has served a useful purpose in that it has encouraged thrift and self-reliance.

The optimism that once made so many confident that they could always get along without assistance has now disappeared.

Years of unemployment for millions willing and able to work have shaken confidence. The realization that a capacity for labor is no longer a guarantee of livelihood, as in pioneer days, as well as the growing proportion of aging people in our population, has brought an increasingly keen dread of the future. So it is natural that at a time when our economic and financial structure is shaken, the people are clamoring for guarantees of security from the state. This changed attitude is in one sense a sign of decadence, in that it marks a transition from a progressive to an unenterprising social order. Like France and Great Britain, our people are no longer fired by the spirit of economic adventure, nor confident that an easily garnered abundance will assure a comfortable old age.

The easily confident phase could not last forever. The transition to state-aided forms of contributory social insurance was to have been expected and, indeed, should have been inaugurated much sooner. And our dilatoriness in making systematic provision for relief of the aged and the unemployed in part accounts for the current vogue of crazy plans for permitting a large proportion of the people to exist in comfort at the expense of the rest of the community.

One of the major tasks now confronting the Social Security Board is to convince the people that real lasting security for the future lies in supporting moderate contributory pension plans, successfully financed by employers and workers whose joint efforts produce the material wealth out of which pensions, as well as wages and other incomes, have to be paid.

If the kind of person who has a hard head didn't have a hard head, it would collapse because of the vacuum inside.

"There's no place like home." Perhaps that's the reason why so many people are nearly always "o nthe go" these days.

A Dialectical Distinction

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Dorothy Thompson, who writes interestingly if not always profoundly, seeks to establish, in her recent comment on the Strachey deportation proceedings, an identity of methods and objectives between the parties of communism and fascism. This is a fallacy all too common among literary purveyors of political opinion. Are they really purblind, or do they hope thereby to avoid the embarrassment of taking sides in the desperate conflict of our time?

Miss Thompson is correct when she points to the striking similarity in the organizational structures of the comintern and fascistern; as well as in showing how sedulously the latter have aped the former. During the stress of social conflict, Lenin observed, reactionaries are frequently driven to assume the protective coloring of revolutionary language.

The membership in both parties, from the humblest crusader to the fat-salaried hierarchy, is governed by an inflexible discipline. The strategy of this discipline likewise follows a similar pattern. It compasses a scale ranging from the mellifluous suasion of the cultured fellow-traveler to the shattering crescendo of civil war. It begins, as Marx put it, "with the weapon of criticism and ends with the criticism of weapons."

When, however, your accomplished columnist, attempts to press this parallel further, and asserts there is no fundamental difference in the social objectives of communism and fascism then, I fear, she has misread the "obiter dicta" of their respective philosophies. This confusion apparently arises from their surface resemblances which obscure the deeper realities which differentiate the aims of communism from those of fascism.

Fascism is simply capitalism denuded of its parliamentary facade. In Italy and Germany the large financial and industrial corporations still rule, but minus the trappings of an elective congress. Its central inspiration is the preservation of the propertied classes.

Communism, on the contrary, presupposes the utter extinction of the vested interests. This phase is not attained before the preliminary travail of a proletarian dictatorship whose historic role is to liquidate the former owning classes and their retainers.

To date, the dictatorship of capital under fascism seems to have been more uniformly successful than the dictatorship of the proletariat under the Soviets. The former has, for the nonce, effectually disarmed the fighting power of the working class. In the Soviet Union the struggle for communism has been temporarily aborted by the unforeseen accretion of a colossal bureaucratic parasitism. But notwithstanding the false front of the Stalinist state, it remains in essence a proletarian state. There are no capitalists.

"That Cliveden Air"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

On the day Ambassador Kennedy paid tribute to Chamberlain's efforts on behalf of "peace," the newspapers carried stories of further attacks on Lithuania in Polish and German newspapers, presaging new aggression by the Fascist powers.

Peace may mean different things to different people. What kind of peace does Kennedy urge between the democracies and the dictatorships—the peace of Ethiopia, Manchuria, Austria, Czechoslovakia? There is peace in the graveyard, but some of us have other preferences.

What kind of understanding is possible with those to whom treaties are scraps of paper—to whom fredom and democracy are anathema? Moral lepers are not to be dealt with, but quarantined.

In the meantime, might not a breath of our American air overcome some of the effects of that Cliveden atmosphere?

"Fighting Blood Needed"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

So John Bull has turned tail and run away again. This time the Arabs mounted on fiery steeds have frightened the life out of poor paunch-precious John. Now we're sure England bows to force instead of to reason. Force is the only practical remedy for national ailments. Nothing permanent and lasting has ever come from the Hague Court, the League of Nations and the Versailles Treaty.

Lo! the poor Jews! For 2,000 years they have been persecuted, tortured, ostracized and robbed. They have no home. They have suffered patiently. Perhaps they believe in that phrase, "The meek shall inherit the earth." If they do, they've got a long wait.

At last (God bless the British) they have founded a national home in Palestine. Fearing the Arabs on one hand and petting the British on the other hand, they've had a tough time staying in the middle and building an oasis out of a desert. Now they're all set. There's 400,000 Jews in Palestine. But they're still a minority. The Arabs are busy raising hell as to who owns what. The Jews, for the most part, remain calm but fearful. They've built Palestine up. Haven't they got the courage to defend it regardless of British "protection" or Arab terrorism? Probably what they need is some good Irish fighting blood in their veins.

Kautsky's Views

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I note with keen pleasure your most understanding editorial of today entitled "Karl Kautsky." You have indeed captured and mastered the philosophy of this last of the great leaders and thinkers of Marxian Socialism, who knew Marx personally and helped lay the foundation of the Marxian school of history and economics.

He was not one of those thinkers, who, like Lenin, did not hesitate to distort the text or the meanings of the writings of Marx when it seemed to serve their purpose. Kautsky was equally opposed to bolshevism and fascism.

From the very beginning of the Soviet regime he fought bolshevism as a "reactionary" force, holding it responsible because of its splitting tactics applied to the international Socialist and labor movement and democracy in general, for the victories of fascism first in Hungary and Bavaria and later in Italy, Germany and Austria. He recognized "the kiss of death" to Social Democracy, implicit in the pre-Hitler German Communist cry of "after Hitler come we."

It is therefore, that with the exception of France, where a relatively large Communist movement remains, the Socialist and Labor parties in all democratic countries remain almost entirely under the influence of the general ideas and policies advocated by Kautsky.

A victim of the inescapable on the day following his 84th birthday anniversary, he must have known on the day previous, that "down under" in New Zealand, in a free election (unknown in fascist or communist nations) the labor and Socialist government completing its first term in power, was given a mandate by the people to continue in office.

Plight Of The Parks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I was glad to read of the well-deserved recognition accorded Robert Moses, Park Commissioner of New York, and, oh, for a Robert Moses in Washington!

In 25 years' residence I have never known the local parks to look so thin, poor and unkept as under their present administrators.

Even Lafayette Square, "the front yard of the White House," once a lovely place and still observed by hundreds of thousands of yearly visitors, is now unwatered, unweeded and in large brown patches as barren of even grass as a railroad yard. All vestige of once beautiful flowers and shrubbery as well as many trees have disappeared with nothing except a few feeble, struggling saplings to take their place. This is also true of most of the other small city parks.

That it is perfectly possible to keep grass green virtually the year round in Washington is shown by the White House grounds and the luxuriant, velvety lawns of the Pan-American Union and other well tended areas.

With so many men looking for work why is not a small army put work permanently at tending and maintaining the public parks instead of trying to think up new, forced and unnecessary "projects" that produce nothing of either beauty or use and furnish only sporadic employment?

Recurrent Lynchings

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have read with keen interest your editorial of October 15, "Recurrent Lynchings." I wish it were possible to believe that each of those who opposed the Federal anti-lynching bill in the Seventy-fifth Congress was sincere enough in his opposition "to be sickened by each fresh outbreak of mob violence." The facts are worse than your editorial indicates, due, however, to no fault of yours.

The number of authenticated lynchings, to date this year, is six. There is at least one other case of mob murder now under investigation in which all the facts disclosed indicate it too must be classed as a lynching. But, confining ourselves to the six known lynchings, there has not been a single arrest, much less prosecution, of any one of the lynchers.

According to the report of an investigation made of the lynching on October 17 at Ruston, La.—the home State of Senator Allen J. Ellender who spoke for six days on the floor of the Senate during the filibuster against the anti-lynching bill—the victim, a 19-year-old mental defective, was beaten unmercifully with straps and boards to exact a confession.

The Post is most correct in characterizing these continued lynchings as an "utterly degenerate practice." We cannot agree with The Post's contention that Federal legislation to eradicate such utterly degenerate practices is "repugnant to the American system of government." It is imperative that the fight for this legislation be renewed in the coming session of Congress with even greater vigor than in the past so that, backed by an overwhelming public opinion, white and Negro, South and North, it may overcome the obstructionist tactics of a handful of Senators who in the main come from States which have the most notorious lynching records.

WALTER WHITE,
Secretary, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.
New York, Oct. 19.

Editor's Note: In placing the number of lynchings this year at three The Post relied upon a report from Tuskegee Institute. Since the editorial in question was written a recheck has been made. The department of records and research of Tuskegee now places the "definitely recorded lynchings" through October 13 at four.

The Post Impressionist

"Sweetest Day"

THIS, may I remind you, is "Sweetest Day." In a number of towns and cities throughout the country the fact is being energetically "publicized" by every available means. It is to be a day on which almost anybody may give you almost anything, for the sole purpose of making you happy.

Confectioners are primarily responsible for the festival, although this year, they report, a number of trades in various cities have joined to make the day mean more to more people. They include druggists, dry-goods stores, jewelers, florists, apparel shops, haberdashers, luggage emporiums, department stores, hardware merchants. Trunks, trinkets and taffies are to be indiscriminately used to produce happiness for buyers, recipients and merchants.

There isn't any hoary tradition behind Sweetest Day, although the experiments that gave rise to it were made largely during the fabulous era "before the depression." It came into existence originally through the flat of a few confectioners' associations, and because it was discovered that, besides making forgotten and unfortunate citizens happier through presents, it increased sales of candy from 5 to 2,500 per cent over average Saturdays. Origin of the day is not considered to have much to do with the matter. It is its effect and usefulness that count, for the associations have discovered they are in tune with national objectives.

"Business," states a rationalization issued by the Associated Retail Confectioners of the United States, Inc., is the life-blood of the Nation. Profits, wages, buying, all are essential to the well-being of our people. Therefore, in principle, Sweetest Day stands for something that should be encouraged, and encouraged not merely by a gesture but by the ardent support, and staunch backing of everybody who believes in maintaing what has been called the American standard of living.

Another persuasive plea on behalf of encouraging this larger economic purpose, while exercising sentiment on behalf of lonely and discouraged souls, has been phrased by one confessioner's leader as follows:

"Every place I go, especially in the last six or seven years, I have heard this one cry: 'We want pay rolls. We want buying power. We want ability to do business on a progressive basis.'

"I can't see," he added, "that anybody elected to office in this country can be unconscious of that need for most business in this country. And if a day can be fortified and built up and strengthened—a day for trading to become built up by the official recognition given by a mayor, by a governor, or even by the head of the Federal Government, who can say that we are not doing a thing that isn't wise, sound and economic?"

When the beneficent nature of Sweetest Day is studied, as it has worked out in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, Buffalo, and other large cities, and is compared with other enterprises for giving a boost to prosperity—such for example as building large navies and armies—the reasoning expressed above makes at least a little sense.

The Mayor of Cleveland, in proclaiming the day last year, very aptly pointed out, "Not too many opportunities can be provided on which to remember our mothers, wives, sweethearts, the aged, the underprivileged or the unfortunate. In their honor and with a view toward the observance of a day for them, I hereby proclaim and set aside Saturday, October 16, 1937, as the 'Sweetest Day of the Year.'"

And in token of their entire agreement with the mayor, confectioners of Cleveland distributed 6,000 boxes of candy gratis to 38 institutions; and sold a great many more that were privately conveyed to the classes mentioned by his honor.

The above reasoning, which provides the sound and sane basis for Sweetest Day, and throws some light on the early growth of an institution that may some day rival Mother's Day and April Fools' as automatically celebrated events, should be put on record for posterity, as well as for contemporaries. It possesses a salty realism that unfortunately is not made part of most propaganda. Other pronouncements, however, are calculated to spare the ordinary reader for radio auditor too great an admixture of the highly practical, with the softly sentimental side of the day.

So that none of us may forget the spirit of the day, several expressions or slogans have been formulated. In a lot of places over this land they are being iterated and re-iterated this week. "Sweetest Day—October 22—Make Someone Happy" is the chief. For variety's sake there are others: "Remember to Make Someone Happy on Sweetest Day, October 22." "Saturday is Sweetest Day. Make It a Day to Think of the Happiness of Others." "Go out of your way to make someone else glad with a friendly smile, a kind word, a thoughtful gift."

The above report is submitted for what sweet relief it may afford the mind from bitter, ungladsome, international news.

Driver's Phantasy

I FORGOT to tell you about the hunting last Sunday, the first day of legal shooting of Sunday drivers. After all these years of protection the game was plentiful along practically all the roads, and the highway police, who were in considerable numbers, interfered only to settle disputes such as the time when I got a fine buck in the act of creeping at the head of a long line of cars on a narrow, winding road and another hunter claimed him.

It was a close decision and I couldn't blame the other sportsman for wanting credit for the kill, considering that we fired almost simultaneously, but the trooper decided from the direction of the bullet that the honor belonged to me, and the other claimant very courteously offered his hand and his congratulations, saying, "I had had my eye on that creeper for years, and I suppose I was overanxious."

"HE WRECKED a friend of mine on a curve near here one Sunday several years ago. My friend was trying to go somewhere on an important errand, and this creeper was poking along, blocking traffic with at least 20 cars behind him, all leap-frogging and taking desperate chances against the oncoming traffic in the effort to get free of him.

"Finally, my friend reached a position just behind him and made several efforts to honk him over and pass him. But when my friend would honk he would lean out the window and snarl the way they do; and when he would try to pass, the creeper would step on it until they would come to another hill or curve, where he would be forced to fall back.

"AFTER 9 MILES of this my friend took a desperate chance on a curve, met another car and was wrecked. His back was broken, his wife's face was terribly mutilated by flying glass and two persons in the oncoming car were badly hurt.

"So, naturally, you see, I figured him to be my creeper, for I had been watching him many Sundays since then, always longing for the day when they would lift the law. However, the pleasure is almost as great as though I had got him myself. You deserve all credit, but I know you will permit me to share the satisfaction with you."

THERE WAS A LULL in luck for some time after that, although others out for the sport were accumulating good bags of creepers. But along toward noon there came a fine specimen, steering with his right hand and with his left hand out the window holding onto the roof of his car.

This one was not a creeper but a nonsignaler, and I blew him through when he came to a turnoff and swung far over to the left side of the road to make a right-hand turn, too lazy to use his brake and give a signal. As he swung left I naturally thought that he was turning left and started to pass on his right, so when he turned right without dropping speed he forced me toward the ditch.

It was then that I let him have it, and a trooper who came up a minute later said admiringly: "You ought to enter him for the prize. I saw it all, and he is one of the finest specimens of that particular type of pest that I ever saw. I would like to have had him for myself, but we troopers are not allowed to take part in the sport. If we were I am afraid there would be no game left after a few hours."

ANOTHER HUNTER got an interesting specimen, a buck riding along, wabbling all over a busy highway at about 20 miles an hour, with his right arm around a doe, who was almost in his lap. This one would take his left hand off the steering wheel now and again to remove a cigar from his face to shake off the ash and there were half a dozen hunters strung out behind him, all anxious to make the kill.

The one who got him was in an oncoming car in the other lane. He sized up the situation in a quick glimpse and knocked off the game right under the very eyes of those who were edging along in pursuit, but there was no rancor whatever.

They all got out and congratulated the lucky sportsman. The spirit of the hunters was magnificent throughout.

THERE WERE A FEW speeders in the bag, but not many, for the game around here consists more of creepers on the narrow roads, one-handers and non-signalers. Those that happened to be out last Sunday were almost exterminated, but, of course, not all of them were out, and there is no reason to fear that there will be any lack of sport on the annual open Sunday for legal shooting next fall. A few drunks were bagged, but not many.

There has been some protest over the "slaughter," as some people call it, but that was all settled in advance when it was pointed out that such drivers themselves cause terrible slaughter on the highways all year long and that it was in the interests of humanity to reduce their numbers by one day's legal shooting every year.

Christmas Bazaar Set For Rleigh Employes

The Hotel Raleigh will hold a Christmas bazaar December 21 and 22 at which the work of employes will be exhibited and sold. Feeling that the artistic efforts of the employes should be encouraged, the management plans to turn over a ball room to the bazaar. The public will be invited.

Royal Birthday

He (Prince Edward) ate his breakfast with ill-concealed impatience . . .

After the meal he went into the "present room," took stock of his new treasures. Two gifts immediately established themselves in the young man's favor: a new racing car, driven by pedals, from his father, and a real grown-up tricycle from his grandmother, Queen Mary.

So keen was he to get out into the grounds, practice driving his new car, that he had time for only a cursory examination of his other presents.

A pair of miniature black hairbrushes received a rapid "once-over," a large bottle of plain boiled sweets from cousins Elizabeth and Margaret Rose received a slightly longer examination, was retained in memory "for future reference." And then out into the grounds for a drive.

At tea-time, tired but happy, he faced a two-tiered plain sponge birthday cake topped with the inscription in pink icing: "Many Happy Returns of the Day." With one puff he successfully extinguished the three candles.

Guests at Prince Edward's tea-party were his mother and father, the Duke and Duchess of Kent, his grandmother, Queen Mary, and his little sister, Princess Alexandra.

China's Big Hope

By Mark J. Ginsbourg

Progress Of The Guerilla War

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

THREE HUNDRED and fifty thousand fresh Japanese troops were landed in Tanghu, North China, in the last three weeks. The dispatch of this huge force, which brought up the strength of the Japanese army on the continent to 1,000,000 men, was Nippon's first move in meeting the challenge of guerrilla warfare.

While Tokyo would not admit it, the Japanese general staff and economic interests are seriously alarmed by the menace presented by guerrilla units operating in the territory nominally under Japanese control.

Begotten of excesses and destruction wrecked by the invading army itself and carefully nurtured by Communist organizers, guerrillas today form China's main hope, Nippon's greatest despair.

The invading armies have thus far overrun roughly a fourth of China's territory, but their authority is confined to a few cities and railway lines.

It was eight months ago that the general staff in Tokyo first realized that the Chinese government would not surrender despite its defeats. Consequently, the Japanese military minds set as their objective the occupation of all major cities and control of means of communication and transportation in the hope that the national government would collapse of sheer exhaustion.

TOKYO, HOWEVER, again miscalculated. The Chinese government exhibited a remarkable staying power and an incredible hold on the people's loyalty. Moreover, the devastation wrought by the invading army automatically filled the ranks of guerrilla units, springing up spontaneously in the rear of the rapidly advancing Japanese forces.

The Japanese countermeasures were strikingly ineffective. Although the policy of burning down villages suspected of harboring guerrillas still is pursued in some provinces, it only increases the number of hungry, armed men eager to revenge their distress.

Another method—that of purchasing the allegiance of bandit gangs—also proved to be ineffective. These "converts" to the cause of what the Japanese press describes as Sino-Japanese cooperation, meet with bitter opposition from the general populace and with gratifying regularity once again change their colors, after killing their Japanese officers and "advisers."

Still another method is to use the so-called pacification squads of the army's secret service. Agents of this force—all men speaking fluent Chinese and intimately acquainted with the people and mores of the region—attempt to enlist the support of the propertied groups in towns or villages.

This is done either by placing rich men on the so-called Peace Maintenance Commissions, or—if all the wealthy people are gone—by transferring their property to other men, who thus receive a strong incentive to cooperate with the Japanese.

AN ATTEMPT has been made to employ this policy on a province-wide scale in Chekiang, where the 25 per cent reduction in land rents made by the Chinese Government was abolished by the new Japanese-backed regime.

Such a move naturally tends to create a community of aims between the propertied groups and the Japanese, but it simultaneously alienates farm tenants, who immediately turn to guerrillas for assistance.

The landing of troops in Tangku, however, was the first concerted, large-scale move to combat guerrillas. The plan apparently is to create an enormous triangle whose sides would roughly run from Shanghai to Hankow and thence to Peiping.

With the lines closely guarded to prevent penetration by Chinese regular troops, the newly arrived units would then proceed to "clean up" the area contained within the triangle.

These tactics, however, are also bound to meet with failure. Guerrilla warfare will continue unabated as long as farmers have no incentive to return to their fields. Such incentive will remain absent as long as the Japanese continue to bring peace to China's tortured countryside on the sharp points of their bayonets.

On the contrary, it is safe to predict that the blood and iron policy of the Japanese army will, for at least another year, continue to drive workers and farmers into the ranks of guerrillas, especially in North China and in Kiangsi Province.

WHAT THE Japanese are facing in China has been strikingly demonstrated in Shansi. It required the Japanese army exactly three weeks last February to drive a wedge across the province. In the course of this thrust tens of thousands of Chinese soldiers were killed and hundreds of towns and villages destroyed.

But as soon as the Japanese troops withdrew to the larger towns to rest on their laurels, guerrillas came down from the mountains and reoccupied all the ungarrisoned towns. Thus it was that last month the army's spokesman, not without embarrassment, confessed that another costly province-wide campaign was in progress.

In Hopei, practically within a stone throw of Peiping and Tientsin, millions of peasants live under local governments organized by guerrillas and a governor appointed by the national government exercises greater authority over the province than any of his predecessors did in the past decade.

From this guerrilla-ruled territory, partisans make nightly raids upon Japanese outposts strung along the railways running to Hankow and Nanking, derail troop trains, ambush motor transports and thwart the Japanese efforts to convert North China into an annex of the Japanese economic empire.

Although describing these units as "Communist bandits," the Japanese themselves give a grudging tribute to guerrillas in their enthusiastic accounts of attacks repelled by Japanese columns.

It is undoubtedly true that the attacks are repulsed, for the Japanese are both alert and well-equipped. But each of these innumerable encounters claims its toll of Japanese lives and necessitates the continuation of dangerous and costly puntive expeditions.

It is the performance of Communist guerrilla units in Shansi and Hopei that hakes the Chinese leaders believe they have found the key to a victory over Japan. The objective of the guerrilla campaign is to force Nippon to maintain an enormous army in China to protect the army-begotten governments and to secure her territorial gains. Nippon's slim coffers, these leaders believe, will not be able to stand the strain of ceaseless warfare.

BUT THE WHOLESALE adoption of guerrilla tactics provides an inviting field of activity to unscrupulous or hungry men. The general distribution of arms, advocated by Communists, may serve its ends now, but China will pay a heavy price for it when the war, in one manner or another, is brought to an end.

In guerrilla warfare, China has evolved a weapon of terrifying potentialities. Used wisely it may yet defeat Japan. Its unwise employment will, however, be a greater plague than this unhappy war. And in the last resort, all is rooted in the attitude of the long-suffering Four Hundred Millions, for in their support of the partisans alone is there hope of success. Thus far, this support has been granted unflinchingly.

Today And Tomorrow

Envoy's Job Grows Complex

BY WAY of Washington the Associated Press has just made it known that when Ambassador Kennedy is invited to make a speech, he tries it out first on his wife to find out from her how the people back home will feel about it. This shows how complicated has become the task of a modern ambassador. In former days he had three main duties—to report correctly but secretly what the foreign government was doing and was going to do, to be the advocate in private negotiation of the American Government's policies, and to make himself generally agreeable to the governing class in the foreign capital where he was stationed.

But now it seems that an ambassador has also to make speeches on public questions designed to please both the voters at home and the voters in the foreign country. That must be a heavy burden to a conscientious man.

MY IMPRESSION is that this additional burden is self-imposed and unnecessary. It is true that ambassadors have to go to public dinners, to the unveiling of monuments and to functions of all kinds. It is true that they have to say a few well chosen words and that they cannot sit quiet and say nothing. But in former days it was well understood by ambassadors that when they rose to their feet to say something, they were a complete success if they could sit down having managed to say nothing. On very rare occasions, to be sure, an ambassador did say something that mattered. But that was only on specific instructions from his government. On all other occasions; it was understood that the speeches of an ambassador were to be polite, if possible amusing, discourse on the weather, the scenery, the very dead past, the altogether remote future, and a discreet selection of the less controversial eternal verities.

It was only in private by secret code and in carefully guarded reports meant for his own government alone that an ambassador said what he really thought about foreign statesmen and about controversial questions. For an ambassador did not regard himself as a politician with a constituency but as the representative of his government observing and dealing with a foreign government.

AMONG AMERICAN diplomatic representatives abroad some follow the tradition of former days and some do not. The dividing line is very clearly marked. The professional career men, the men who are spending their lives in the foreign service, preserve the rule of silence except when specifically instructed. The amateur and temporary diplomats take their speeches very seriously. Ambassadors of this type soon tend to become each a little State Department with a little foreign policy of his own.

The Secretary of State back in Washington can only groan and wring his hands in the privacy of his office. For the amateur and temporary diplomats are beyond his control. They are men of influence and political importance at home. Though in form they usually report to the Secretary of State, in fact they do not owe their appointments to him, and so, if they are not exactly sovereign states, they are at least self-governing dominions. In order to avoid misunderstanding, it is sometimes necessary to explain to foreign offices and to editors abroad the difference between an utterance by an American professional diplomat and one by an amateur diplomat.

ON THE WHOLE there is no more to be said for free speech by ambassadors than for free speech by Justices of the Supreme Court. When Mr. Dodd, for example, was in Berlin he made some eloquent speeches about the difference between democracy and dictatorship. The net effect was that the doors were closed to him in Berlin, and he could not get first hand information to report to Washington or get at the rulers of Germany to negotiate with them on American matters. Mr. Kennedy's line is the opposite one. He is publicly an enthusiast for Mr. Chamberlain and his government; and having committed himself publicly to this view, he is in danger of acquiring a personal interest in the success of Mr. Chamberlain's career, and of becoming in consequence the advocate of Mr. Chamberlain's policies to Washington rather than of Mr. Hull's policies to London.

That is why Mrs. Kennedy may be said to have shown excellent intuition when, as Mr. Kennedy informed the Associated Press, she told her husband that "our ambassadors are supposed to lose all their powers of resistance when they get to London." For the surest way to lose one's powers of resistance in a foreign capital is to stake one's personal reputation as a prophet on the destiny of the politician who happens to be in power and on the policies he happens to be carrying out.

NO DOUBT the professional diplomats have their faults and their deficiencies. But in general the traditions of a foreign service are based on a long and varied practical experience of human affairs, and they work better than the improvisations of amateurs. Once in a while, as in the case of the late Dwight Mordow, an exceptional man will break the rules of diplomacy and accomplish something important. Mr. Morrow, though he was not a career diplomat, was a profound student of diplomatic history, and when he broke the rules of the game he knew exactly what he was doing and why the rule needed to be broken in that instance.

Even if it is desirable to break the rules occasionally, the occasions should be exceptional. The real task of an ambassador, especially of an American ambassador in Europe, is to be undeceived so that he can correctly inform his own government, and to be unentangled so that he can make effective his own government's policies. That is a hard job and, to do it well, an ambassador cannot afford to express views except when he is instructed to express them as part of the policy of his government. For he is an agent, not a principal; he is the confidential representative of his government, not a public figure in his own right.

SO MRS. KENNEDY should tell her husband that if the subject of their nine children and of the hole-in-one at the Stoke Poges golf course is exhausted, he can still talk about Alfred the Great, Shakespeare, Isaak Walton, the beauty of the English spring and the snows of yesteryear.

And the British, who follow this practice rigorously in their own diplomacy, will respect him all the more.

Goering Believed Working on Reich '8-Year Plan'

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Oct. 21.—Announcement that pressure of work would keep Field Marshal Gen. Goering from Nazi Party and social events for some months served today to buttress reports that Germany's four-year economic plan may be revised in the light of German economic conquests in eastern Europe, and expanded to encompass eight or even ten years.

Goering, administrator of the four-year plan, which is two years old today, has retired to Karinhall, his country seat near Berlin, where he is understood to be busy conferring with leading industrialists on plans for adjusting Germany's economy to the enlarged sphere created by accelerated trade with Turkey, Poland, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Rumania, Bulgaria and Greece.

French Arrest Police Inspector As Italian Spy

Paris, Oct. 21 (AP).—A French police drive against a spy ring allegedly serving Italy brought the arrest of one of its own inspectors.

Following the arrest last night of Adrian Grosso, Italian consular agent at Moutiers, by order of a military court, Police Inspector Jean Rakowsky was taken into custody in his own office at the Paris police headquarters.

Shortly afterward, Vincenti Bellavia, an Italian living in the fashionable Passy section of Paris, was arrested.

Detectives said the two men admitted working together when confronted with evidence.

A police announcement said Rakowsky, 52, had confessed to furnishing confidential information to an Italian secret agent for 18 months.

President—What a relief to know nobody can disturb me!

President (reading)—"Phone the White House at once." I'll do nothing of the kind. I came out here for seclusion. Heigh ho! Isn't it nice?

Aide—Away from everything!

President (after a few moments)—What are you so uneasy about, major?

Aide—I'm not uneasy.

President—Yes, you are.

Aide (uncomfortably)—Well, to tell the truth, I promised the wife I'd phone her about something.

President—You can wait until you go to the village. We've got to get used to it. (He goes to a window and gazes out.) Isn't it swell? Away from everything!

(There is a knock at the door.)

Aide—What is it?

Stranger (at door)—I am working my way through college. If I get 300 subscriptions to——

Aide (giving him the rush)—Beat it!

President (still gazing out of window)—How I adore the deep silences of these woods!

(A bell rings loudly. The President and his aide are startled. They listen, unbelieving. It rings again.)

President (sternly)—Some Republican stuck a phone in the building somewhere.

(The bell rings louder. It seems to come from without.)

Aide (opening the door)—It's the scissors-grinder.

President—Thank Heaven!

Aide (answering another knock at the door)—What is it?

Stranger—I knew there was a new house here and I wondered if the tenant had arranged for milk yet——

Aide (fiercely)—Out! Scat!

President—Who was that?

Aide — A pest about milk. I threw him out.

Sudden Lehman Shift

By Mark Sullivan

Why Is He Running?

I BEGIN by saying Gov. Lehman of New York is a good man. I do not here imply anything contrary to his high reputation, in public life and private. He has been a good Governor. Doubtless, if re-elected, he would be a good Governor again. Nevertheless, Gov. Lehman has a question to answer—a question which, considering certain circumstances, it is difficult for Mr. Lehman to answer consistently with his high character.

The question Gov. Lehman must answer is as simple as this: Why is he running against Mr. Dewey? Why is he trying so hard to prevent Thomas E. Dewey from becoming Governor of New York?

UP TO A CERTAIN day and hour, Mr. Lehman did not want to be Governor again. He wanted to run for another office, United States Senator. He asserted, publicly and privately, that he would not take another nomination for the governorship. Moreover, up to that same day an hour, it is fair to assume President Roosevelt did not want Mr. Lehman to be Governor again—nor, presumably, anything else in public life.

Gov. Lehman had opposed Mr. Roosevelt's court measure, and Mr. Roosevelt did not like that. Also Mr. Lehman patted himself on the back, and was justly patted by others, for having balanced New York's budget.

That was an implied reproach to Mr. Roosevelt. For the budget which Mr. Lehman balanced was the one Mr. Roosevelt, while Governor, had unbalanced. Besides, Mr. Roosevelt is now engaged in seriously unbalancing another budget. Mr. Roosevelt did not relish praise of Gov. Lehman for the virtue of budget balancing; he made his irritation plain.

SO, UP TO A certain day and hour, Mr. Roosevelt presumably did not wish Mr. Lehman to be Governor again; and Mr. Lehman certainly did not wish himself to be Governor again.

What changed that? What happened to reverse Mr. Lehman's wish? Everybody assumes one reason. The Republicans nominated Mr. Dewey for Governor. An hour before Mr. Dewey was nominated, Mr. Lehman was running away from the governorship. An hour afterward, and ever since, Mr. Lehman has been running after the governorship.

Why the change Doubtless Mr. Lehman would say he changed merely because there was a good chance Mr. Dewey might be elected. Had the Republicans nominated any one else, Mr. Lehman would have continued to avoid the governorship. Mr. Lehman changed his wish merely because Mr. Dewey was the strongest candidate the Republicans could nominate. Mr. Lehman would say he gave up his personal wish out of deference to the interest and wish of the Democratic Party and its leaders. That is an understandable political motive.

BUT MR. LEHMAN is serving the wish of another group even more than he is serving the wish of the Democratic leaders. He is serving the wish of every gangster and racketeer in New York. He is serving the wish of every go-between who serves as a mouthpiece for the gangsters in the political machines of every large city in New York. He is serving the wish of every person who knows that if Mr. Dewey is elected Governor there will be an end to gangsterdom and to the power of gangsterdom in politics.

Mr. Lehman may say he is serving the Democratic Party. But is he serving the public? Mr Lehman's goodness may be very good—but it does not quite reach that degree of goodness which puts public interest above party.

AND EVEN SO FAR as Mr. Lehman is serving party, he cannot be happy serving that part of his party which is the New Deal. Lehman has shown that he dislikes much of the New Deal. The best justification of Mr. Lehman would be he thinks that by running for Governor again he is helping the Democratic part of the party, strengthening it so that it may get rid of the New Deal Party and again be the Democratic Party.

But, even assuming this motive exists, there is still doubt whether, under the conditions in New York, Mr. Lehman served the public interest by trying to prevent Mr. Dewey from becoming Governor. Besides, if this motive exists, can it be that Mr. Roosevelt wanted Mr. Lehman to run again? And what will Mr. Roosevelt say if and when he makes a campaign speech in New York?

By Scott Hart The Federal Diary

CIVIL SERVICE President Harry B. Mitchell appeared to have dropped his hint about a court of appeals for Government workers in a most inadvertent manner. It is probable that on a second thought he would have said nothing at all.

But the talk, back and forth in panel fashion, had gone on for some three hours in the Civil Service Assembly's Thursday afternoon meeting, and to say the least, the subject was making little, if any, progress. Everyone was agreeing that a court was needed, but the talk stayed in that twilight zone of theory until Commissioner Mitchell said something concrete.

And then, having ventured onto something practical, the commissioner as quickly withdrew. But the oat was out of the bag and it seems that officialdom is actually giving more than a passing attention to a concrete plan.

This plan, at first blush, seems practical because it follows the straight and clear lines of common sense. It amounts to nothing more than this: To let each department and agency have its own appeals system, subject, in the final determination of cases, to a last court of appeals which might be established within the Civil Service Commission. This final court, like any supreme court, would have the last say and the authority to sustain its findings.

* * * *

SUCH A system would seem definitely to put the crimp in any fear that employes might have of airing out their grievances before the appeals body. There is one main reason:

The element of reprisal on the part of a petty chief would leave the picture. Say, for example, that a clerk appealed to the departmental body some matter on which he felt aggrieved. Suppose the court ruled in his favor. The petty chief might be sore, to say the least of it; but it more than likely that his grudge would be kept within his own bosom and not unloaded on the clerk.

For the chances would be too strong that if reprisal were attempted the clerk would carry the matter up to the final court where might sit the civil service commissioners themselves, and if not themselves, then some group very close to them. The petty chief would obviously dislike for his spleen to be made known in such high quarters.

INASMUCH as the Congress is certain to shy from establishing any independent appeals body, the commissioner's plan—it is considered that Mr. Mitchell thought the matter out himself—is the workable one. Certainly, amidst all the talk, it is the only concrete suggestion heard.

* * * *

Innovation: Agriculture's Welfare Store, near the tunnel between the Administration and South Buildings—is offering for employe sale beef produced by a Virginia experimental station; high-grade, 2-year-old Hereford steers were fattened with two different kinds of feed, and the resulting beef is designated as A and B.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics wants the patrons to try steaks and roasts from both types, and to send in preferences on blanks which will soon be furnished. The details of the experiments are confidential.

This is an interesting proposition, but it seems a waste of time. Why not call in the professional tasters from the Bureau of Home Economics? But maybe that is impracticable now, for the fall season is at hand and it is then that the tasters are absorbed—and how—on the oozy brown turkeys!

Freshmen Hold Annual Revolt At American U.

The 100 freshmen at American University staged their annual revolt against upper class domination yesterday.

Clad in sheets and "swinging" a funeral dirge they marched about the campus and buried their name tags in a grave dug by two of their energetic members. Their traditional enemies, the sophomores, made no move to stop them.

Each fall freshmen are required to wear tags bearing their names. It is traditional that about a month after school they revolt and throw off their signs of servitude.

Mt. Rainier Church Is on 7-Day Week

Such spirited organizations as the Men's Bible Class, which is staging an outing this afternoon at Burnt Mills, have helped to make the Mount Rainier Christian Church a seven-day-in-the-week congregation.

REV. MILLER (pastor)

For, according to the pastor, the Rev. Fred L. Miller, "there always is something doing" at his church, the women's societies of which sponsored a turkey dinner Thursday night.

Outstanding in women's activities, which include social service, missionary and peace programs, placing altar flowers each Sunday and various other tasks, is Mrs. Nora Robb, also co-organist of the choir, which met for its weekly rehearsal after the turkey dinner. Mrs. Laura Foulks, director of the choristers, also leads the youth choir. Mrs. Helen Bower is organist.

Stanforth Stands Out

Mount Rainier Church, organized in 1903, always has been blessed with capable leaders, a group of whom convened last Monday night to exchange ideas for better coordination of church activities.

No such meeting would be complete without Homer L. Stanforth, for 25 years superintendent of the Sunday school, which has 37 classes. Active in Christian education work of the Disciples of Christ, he also is a leader in interdenominational enterprises in Mount Rainier.

MR. BREWOOD (Bible Class)

Stanforth also serves on the board of elders, consisting of Dr. H. T. Clayton, Carl H. Rader, George Targett, J. R. Venning, B. H. Kaufman and Henry Brewood, the latter one of the church's charter members. Enthusiastic supporter of the men's class, of which Carl Bock is teacher and "Bill" Egbert president, Brewood led the midweek prayer service Wednesday.

One of the most interesting original members of the Mount Rainier congregation is 87-year-old Mrs. Maude E. (Mother) Gates, of 2117 Kearney street northeast, who made a perfect Sunday school attendance record in 1937, and who has missed few Sundays in her long church affiliation.

BON DURANT (since 1903)

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pryor, whose son, Charles Pryor, jr., conducted a weiner roast last Tuesday for his class of 13-year-old boys, are also busy charter members. Pryor, sr., a retired carpenter, has contributed much handwork to the church, including several hand-carved walnut-inlaid collection plates and carved wooden animal novelties for the kindergarten department.

Other charter members are Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Foster, choristers, the latter also teacher of the Loyal-Berean Woman's Class, of which Mrs. Helen Bower is president; Dr. H. T. Clayton, church clerk, and Edgar and Will Bon Durant. Mrs. Bon Durant is kindergarten instructor.

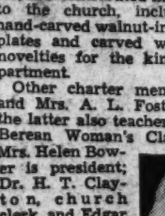
A. L. FOSTER (of choir)

Identified with young people's work are Georgiana Nordeen, primary teacher and leader in programs of the older groups. She was a delegate to the recent conference of the International Council of Religious Education of the Disciples of Christ, at Columbus, Ohio. Other leaders are Mrs. Fred L. Miller, beginners; George Targett, juniors, and Elton H. Brown, adults.

Each Sunday the attention of church-goers is focused on the "Who's Who" department. This feature, in the lobby of the church, consists of a photograph and biography of a member of the congregation, with a rollbook for visitors' names below. The material is filed for future use.

Special Service Slated

Robert Brinson's class, which held a weiner roast last night, and the Boy Scouts, under Raymond Kelley, which met at the same time, are busy groups in the church, of which the following are deacons: Carl Bock, E. H. Bon Durant, B. A. Bower, Elton T. Brown, W. H. Dunn, W. S. Egbert, Oscar Neal and C. E. Nordeen.



BILL EGBERT (deacon)

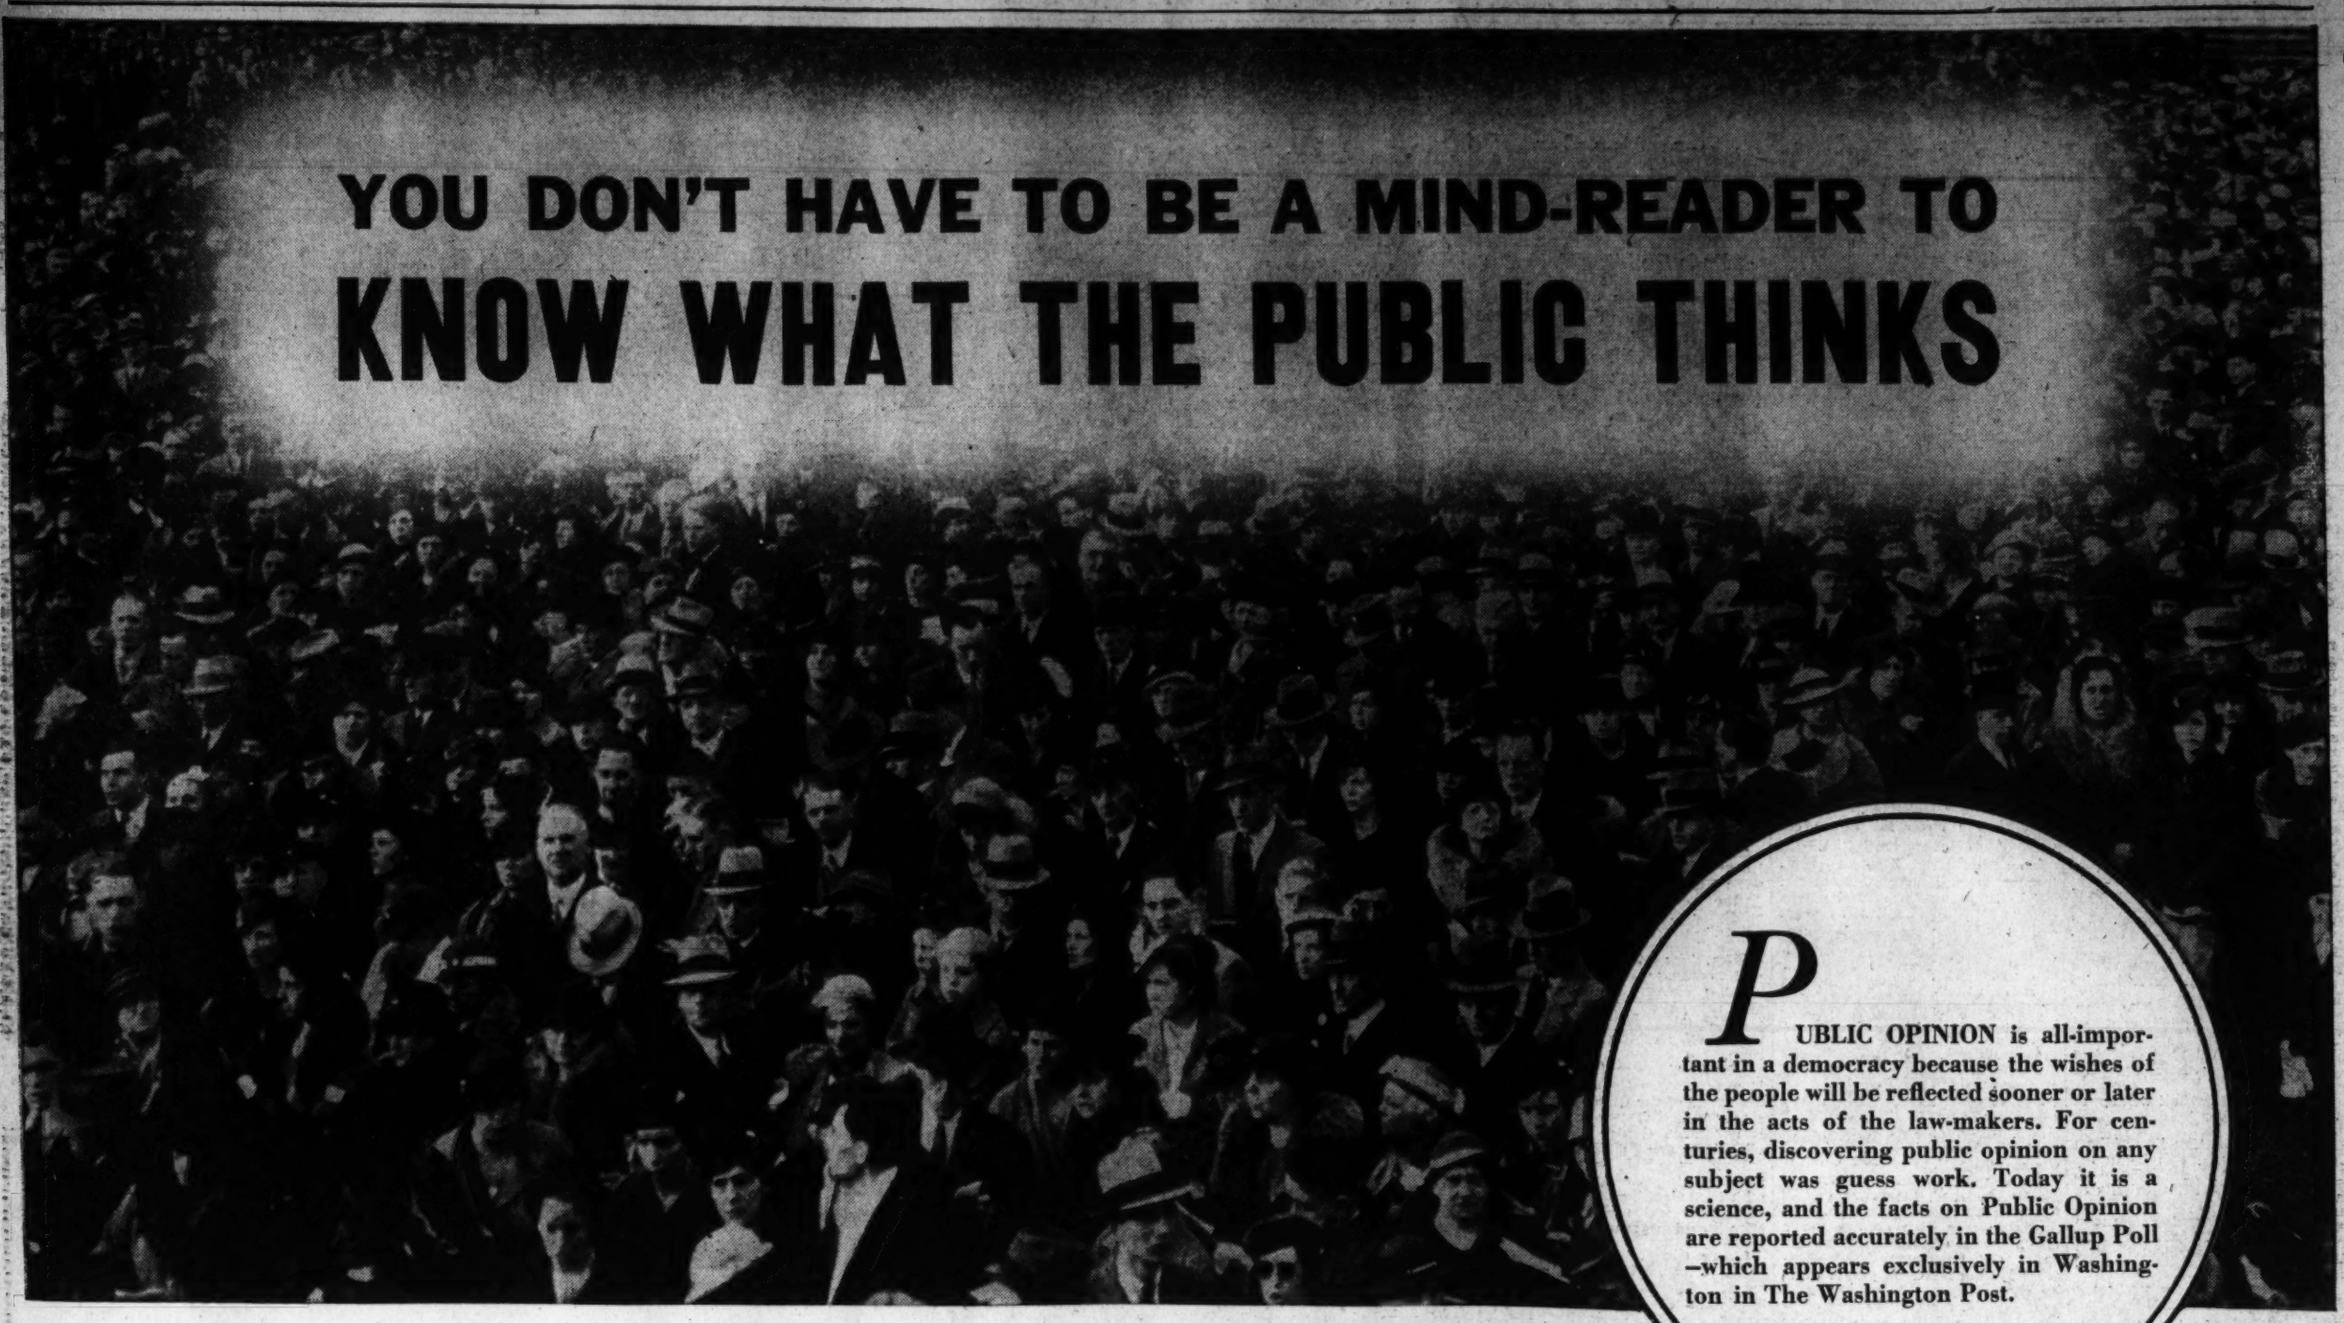
YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE A MIND-READER TO KNOW WHAT THE PUBLIC THINKS



PUBLIC OPINION is all-important in a democracy because the wishes of the people will be reflected sooner or later in the acts of the law-makers. For centuries, discovering public opinion on any subject was guess work. Today it is a science, and the facts on Public Opinion are reported accurately in the Gallup Poll—which appears exclusively in Washington in The Washington Post.

"That's only your opinion. You should read The Gallup Poll. 62% of the public is in favor of the schools teaching the facts about communism, socialism, and fascism."

"Why bother teaching the facts about communism, socialism and fascism? Only a small group is in favor of it."

"There's no question about it: Italy started this whole mess of re-armament."

"You're close. According to the Gallup Poll the public thinks Germany is more responsible than is Italy."

The accuracy of the Gallup Poll has been proved time and again. In 58 out of 64 local national elections, the Gallup Poll correctly predicted the results.

"Most accurate barometer of public opinion," says Newsweek. "Unique . . . authoritative," says Life Magazine. And colleges and teachers, too, praise its value. "When I was teaching at St. John's College, I had my students follow the weekly studies of the Gallup Poll as published in The Post. I am now teaching at Babson Institute and I think the analyses of the Gallup Poll are so valuable that I have subscribed to The Washington Post and am using them each week in my classes," says Julius S. Duncan.

Students, colleges, libraries have all wanted a summary of the Gallup Poll surveys. Now such a summary is available—reprinted from the Public Opinion Quarterly. Send for your copy today.

"I wonder what the public thinks about the Federal Government spending millions to help control venereal diseases."

"The public's all for it. A Gallup Poll survey revealed that 79% of the public favored Congress appropriating $25,000,000 for such a campaign."

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

The beautiful weather of the past ten days attracted a large number of Virginia cub hunters out into the field at dawn's crack. Foxes are plentiful, horses are in the best condition possible, and the countryside is filling up with eager sporting people from all parts of the East.

The fields, or followers, have been large in number this week, but many go only a short way. The real enthusiasts, however, stay to the bitter end, even if it means not being rewarded with a run until late in the afternoon.

Mrs. George A. Garrett, who has been at Chilly Bleak Farm, her Virginia place, since early in September, has been cubbing four times a week with the Orange County Hounds. She has with her for several days Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pruyn, of New York, and Mrs. John MaGee, of Pebble Beach, Fla., who have been touring Virginia and spent two days seeing Williamsburg before arriving at the farm. Mr. and Mrs. Pruyn are the parents of Mrs. Marshall Field, and the Garrett farm belonged to Mr. Field until purchased several years ago by the present owners.

Also staying with the Garretts are Mr. and Mrs. Alberto Blaquier, of Buenos Aires. Mr. Blaquier is a three-goal polo man and plays on the crack Argentine team.

THE MIDDLEBURG HOUNDS met at Mrs. Raymond Belmont's gate the other morning at 6:30. Drawing her place they went to Oliver Iselin's farm, where they started a fox that ran to the old Redmon place onto Turner Wiltshire's, where he circled back to the Carter farm and onto Bill Seipp's. He finally jumped into the Jay Phipps' place, where he was denned after a great run.

Daniel C. Sands, M. F. H., was assisted by Whips Stephen Clark, Newell Ward and Charlie George. Among those out were Mrs. Amory Perkins, Miss Nannie Fred, Miss Willet Leach, Miss Natalie Hazard, Miss Eleanor Mackubin, Freddy Warburg, James McCormick, Louie Duffey, Jerry Webb and about 12 young ladies from Foxcroft School.

On Monday the Middleburg Hounds met at Goodwin's Corner, with Miss Charlotte H. Noland, comaster of the hunt, in command, as Mr. Sands was attending hound trials in Maryland. William Hulbert assisted her.

DRAWING UP across Col Harry Whitfield's place, the field jumped a fox almost immediately, which gave them a good run to the Lud Patton place. They soon started the second fox and had another short run. The morning was getting warm and it was almost breakfast time, so the hounds were taken in. Miss Noland invited the field to her house for a hot breakfast.

Among those out were Miss June Hanes, Miss Julie Scribner, Miss Eleanor Mackubin, Miss Theresa Shook, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Reid, Mrs. Kay George, Miss Willet Leach, Mrs. Robert Maddux, Freddy Warburg and Henry Frost.

Mr. Sands took some of his hounds to the Maryland Foxhound Association's trials recently and won the Hound Derby.

The majority of hunt clubs will not send out fixture cards until November 1, when the regular fox-hunting season begin. Below are several dates for hunts.

Miss Hutchison Becomes Bride

The Takoma Park Presbyterian Church was the scene last evening of the wedding of Miss Margaret Hutchison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hutchison, of Takoma Park, Md., to Mr. Hubert F. Bohnke, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. R. Bohnke, of Washington. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer, at 7 o'clock.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin made on princess lines with a long circular train. Her veil of tulle was fingertip length and caught at the top of the head with a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of roses, lilies of the valley and orchids.

Mrs. Harry B. Gertz, of Washington, the former Miss Dorothy Prichard, of Takoma Park, Md., was the matron of honor, wearing a rose petal taffeta gown with a jacket to match. She carried Queen Mary roses with flowers to match in her hair.

The other attendants were the Misses Marian and Flora McKenzie, of Takoma Park. They wore gowns of Biscay blue made in the same fashion and material as the matron of honor's. They also carried the same kind of flowers.

James A. Chapelear was the best man and the ushers were William Hutchison, jr., brother of the bride, and Harry Gretz.

A reception for 100 guests was held immediately after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Hutchison, mother of the bride, was in sapphire blue velvet, while Mrs. Bohnke, mother of the bridegroom, was in a wine-colored velvet gown of floor length. Both wore corsages of sweetheart roses.

The bridal couple will make their home at 5001 First street northwest after their return from a Northern motor trip, in ten days.

Golden-Necked Squash

Here is a new way to cook small, golden-necked squash: Peel the squash and cut it into half-inch crossway slices. Dip them in cornmeal and sprinkle generously with salt, paprika, onion and celery salt. Brown quickly on both sides in melted bacon fat. Cover and cook until the squash is tender (10 minutes or so). Serve around baked or broiled meats.

Bedtime Story

A Difference in Neighbors

Where some to live in vain will strive
Some other folks you'll find will thrive.
—Old Mother Nature.

Johnny Chuck and Peter Rabbit have long been neighbors, at times near neighbors. They live on much the same food. Both eat grass, clover and other plants. Both have a liking for the things that grow in Farmer Browns garden and so get in mischief there. So all summer they live much alike save that Johnny never is far from his home in the ground and is out chiefly by day, while Peter prefers a bramble-tangle to a hole in the ground and is more active at night.

Yet these neighbors are as different as they very well could be. Just consider what they were doing this beautiful day in late October. Johnny Chuck had come out and sat on his doorstep in the sun just long enough for Peter to make him a very short call. Peter was in high spirits. He liked this cool, crisp weather. It made him want to hop and skip, to run about and kick up his heels. It filled him with pep.

Johnny, on the other hand, was in low spirits. He was full of complaints. He didn't like this cool weather. He had lost his appetite. He had no pep at all. It made him sleepy. Most impolitely he yawned right in Peter's face. Then without even asking to be excused he turned his back on Peter and disappeared down in his house deep in the ground. Peter stared after him. He waited to see if Johnny would come out again. Johnny didn't, so Peter soon gave up and scampered off. This was too fine a day to waste just sitting around.

He Went over to the Old Orchard, to see if Striped Chipmunk, whose house is under the Old Stonewall, was too busy to Gossip

He visited the Smiling Pool to see what was going on there. He went over to the Green Forest to watch Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and Chatterer the Red Squirrel harvesting nuts and acorns and quarreling as they worked. He went over to the Old Orchard to see if Striped Chipmunk, whose home is under the old stonewall, was too busy to gossip. He was. And then because he was in such high spirits Peter hopped right out into the open and dared Flip the Terrier to try to catch him. It was a great race, but Peter reached the old stonewall first. That is what the beautiful fall weather did to Peter Rabbit.

Meanwhile his neighbor, Johnny Chuck, was down in his comfortable bedroom well below the reach of Jack Frost no matter how hard the later might try to get to him. Before he went down he pushed some loose earth up toward the entrance to his house so that it practically closed the door as it were. Then he fixed his bed to suit him. His bed was of dry grass. All the time he was growing more and more drowsy.

"I don't like it," he muttered to himself. "Peter Rabbit may like it but I don't." He meant the cool weather. Of course.

Johnny was so fat that his skin, which in summer was so loose, was now stretched tight. That layer of fat under the skin was Johnny's blanket to keep him warm through the winter. At the same time it was a food supply to be drawn on for such very little as he might need while he slept, and to help out when he should wake in the spring when there would be little food to be found outside.

With his bed arranged to suit him Johnny curled up into almost a ball, tucking his nose down into his waistcoat. Soon he was asleep. That sleep became deeper and deeper. It became so deep a sleep that it was almost as if Johnny no longer lived. Johnny would no more complain about the weather this year, not until next spring. Of ice and snow and bitter cold, of raging storms and hunger and enemies he would know nothing at all. Johnny Chuck had drowsed away into the strange deep sleep that is called hibernation and that only a few of the folk in fur and none of those in feathers can make use of to avoid the discomforts and perils of winter.

So while Peter Rabbit would be out and about all winter, sometimes cold, often hungry, always hunted by enemies, Johnny Chuck would be sleeping. Peter couldn't sleep like that if he wanted to. Johnny couldn't live if he didn't sleep so, for there would be no food he could get.

One and Half Spoonsful of Butter Needed

Fats Can Be Cut in Diet Some Held Essential Required for Vitamin

By Ida Jean Kain.

SCIENTISTS tell us that body fat is stored more easily from fats than from sugars and starches, and since fats also contain more than twice as many calories as these other foods, there is a double reason for their restriction in the diet.

Luckily for the reducer, fat is the one food principle that can be reduced to the minimum. All the fat you really need is one and one-half tablespoons—and that in the form of butter. You need that amount, not because it is fat, but because the butter contributes Vitamin A and palatability to your diet.

Protein cannot be decreased even in the low calorie diet. It is needed daily for the repair of body tissues and must be included in normal amounts. The safe reducing diet, then, always provides lean meat, eggs, and skim milk, buttermilk, or cottage cheese—all rich sources of the complete proteins.

Sugars, Starches Vital

Sugars and starches, the chief sources of energy, cannot be entirely eliminated from your diet. Moreover, taken in the form of fruits, vegetables and whole grains, these sugars and starches are made to furnish valuable vitamins and minerals along with energy.

You can see that the food most easily spared from your menus is fat. It is pure calories and the less of it in the reducing menu the better for you. You need some butter—the minimum is 150 calories. Since there is a limit on whole milk and cream, butter is the surest source of Vitamin A, which is extremely important in building resistance to disease. Your wisest plan is to restrict fats in other forms—and there are plenty of them!

Trim Fat Off Meat

One of the biggest calorie cuts in your diet can be achieved by trimming the fat from your meat. If you are on a particularly strict diet, you might even trim the fat from the meat before cooking so that none of the fat can filter into the lean. In case this sounds silly to you, just compare the calories in lean meats with the same size portions which include fat:

	CALORES

Lean beef—from which all fat has been trimmed, same size cut.....	188

Should Law Student Renounce Girl He Loves, Since Marriage Is Impossible for Years?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man 19 years old and at present I am studying second year law at a local university. About a year and a half ago, I met a girl at a social affair and fell deeply in love with her. After two months' companionship I asked her to go steady with me, and she readily accepted. Last January, we argued over a jealous fit of mine and separated. Three months later, we went back together again, and since then I have been seeing her regularly. Among our friends she is known as my girl. I hope to marry her but my school work, as well as my parents' attitude, forbids even an engagement until at least four years from now.

At present, my hours of work and study make it impossible for me to see her more than once a week. Because of this, we no longer go "steady." However, my presence keeps her from being "dated," and so far as other people know, we are still as close as before. I think it makes her unhappy to remain at home so much, and at times I feel very selfish. I want to give her up entirely, so that she may be free to go as she pleases, but I haven't the courage to do it.

I love her very dearly and each time I think of separation, I am heart and soul against it. But I am willing to make any sacrifice to see her happy. She does not tell me she is unhappy. In fact, she says I am worth waiting for. So I ask your advice. Shall I give her up in order that she may get back into a normal social life with other boys? Or shall I ask her to stick by me until such a time as I can devote my entire attention to her? Very truly yours, UNCERTAIN.

Extremism of Youth

DEAR UNCERTAIN: It is neither wise nor fair for a youth of 19, who must wait years before he will be in a position to think of marriage in terms of financing the proposition, to cut a girl out from the crowd and label her, in the public mind, as his girl and his alone. The reason it isn't advisable is because one's idolatrous devotions of 19 have a way of going with the wind, in due course of time, and becoming mystifying memories by the time one is 23 or more.

Between the ages of 19 and 23, youth is in a period of transition from adolescence into earliest and most tentative maturity, and the individual's tastes, preferences, theories, plans and ambitions are necessarily subject to change—sometimes of a well-nigh revolutionary nature—almost at a moment's notice. Therefore, they constitute no trustworthy foundation on which to erect a permanent structure of any emotional or social sort. A man must first get his own latitudinal and longitudinal bearings in relation to life, with some degree of knowledgable certitude before he undertakes to designate the suitable life partner. Otherwise, he may belatedly discover, to his dismay, that he has mistaken the nearest lamp post for his guiding star.

One's every experience is a fractional part of one's whole education, which definitely is not confined to the school room alone. And since the purpose and value of education has to do with socializing the individual, in the sense of expanding his powers of perception, understanding and adaptability, the youth who restricts his social contacts with the opposite sex, during his most formative and assimilative period, to one girl alone, is a man who is witlessly denying himself an indispensable primary course in the manifold aspects of human nature and in the art of human relationships. His ideals, aspirations, sympathies, self-knowledge and humane understanding are apt to be permanently the poorer for that omission. He has a sorely limited basis of comparison to work from, in assessing and judging human worth —his own and others'.

It is not unlikely that your overweening devotion to this (probably unremarkable) one girl—which currently masters your sense of reason and fair play—is the direct outgrowth of just such social self-limitation. If you are "heart and soul against" separation from her, it probably is not so much because of her individual qualities as because she has become for you the symbol of femininity in your scheme of things, which otherwise is totally devoid of that eminently wholesome, stimulating and satisfying influence. And the same probably is conversely true of her clinging dependence upon your society. Each of you is fettered to the other by lack of social initiative and personal resourcefulness.

The solution of the problem, as I see it, does not entail so exaggerated a measure as your giving each other up entirely. After the fashion of youth, you are thinking in extremes. All or nothing. Accept the fact that you mean a very great deal to each other—or think so—and cherish that golden thread of mutual understanding and affirmation. But don't let it hamstring either of you into leading monastically seclusive lives, apart from each other. If that sense of kinship cannot withstand the pressure of broad social contacts on either side; if it cannot be temporarily lost from sight and dismissed from mind, only to reassert itself with vitality and significance undiminished — as precious and indestructible as ever when you come together again, then it is not at all the divine spark; it is nothing more than a flash in the pan. M. H.

Avoid Errors In English

"I WISH I hadn't OF gone," sobs Joan. Her husband unhappily tries to think of a tactful way to explain that her poor English led the Carters to snub her.

Joan's typical of many wives. Their husbands, alert and getting ahead, quickly catch on to such mistakes as putting OF after "hadn't." But their wives don't realize they must improve, too.

It's true that they avoid such cheap mistakes as the double negative "I didn't go NOWHERE last summer." Instead, they say correctly, "I didn't go ANYWHERE——"

And they aren't likely to complain that "I needed a rest so BAD—it's a wonder I wasn't TOOK SICK." They accurately say, "I needed a rest so BADLY—it's a wonder I wasn't ILL."

But to make the grade with cultured people, avoiding obvious errors isn't enough. Check on the subtler mistakes. Do you say "I'm REAL sorry to hear?" Correctly say "I'm VERY sorry——" Do you say you're AGGRAVATED by the late arrival of a package? You really mean you're IRRITATED.

One such careless blunder can so quickly give a false impression of you—when you're meeting new people at the club, on a trip. Practice correct forms as you do your housework.

If "theirselves" is one of your blunders, repeat "themselves" half a dozen times. If you say the mail is "LIABLE to arrive," practice "the mail is LIKELY to arrive."

How do you find out when you're wrong—when you're right? Our 40-page booklet, COMMON ERRORS IN ENGLISH, lists mistakes you're likely to make, gives correct forms A simple way to charming, correct speech.

Send 15c for our booklet, COMMON ERRORS IN ENGLISH, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Wall-Cleaning Tip

To clean the painted wall behind the refrigerator or stove, tightly attach a soft cloth to a yardstick, broom handle or fishing pole, dip it in warm water and soap suds and poke about at will. To clean linoleum under refrigerators or stoves, dip the cloth in floor wax. This polishes as it cleans.

Finesse in Detail for Black

Fashion has decreed that the too casual woman be replaced by the woman of finesse, according to a style showing held at the Shoreham yesterday. Typical of this year of grace is this all-black ensemble which escapes monotony through nicety of detail

Detail Makes the Woman, Fashion Show Demonstrates

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THERE is no such thing as accidental chic any more. In the dim days of haphazard charm, dependent only on a woman's personality and her freedom with casual modes, clothes could be worn without too much respect for matching colors, accessories and make-up.

This season every detail from the faint tint of complexion pink to the platform sole is of significance in determining whether an ensemble is up to the minute or "old hat." Minutae of detail may be pleasantly wrought by trying any of the following hints, suggested yesterday at the fashion showing at the Shoreham.

For a trip into town on one of these gusty days, try a coppery toned wool frock, detailed from bosom to hem in trim regiments of tucks. Complement this with a vibrant toned spice felt chechia, Lorenzo suede gloves, roomy bag and squarish monk type shoes in identical colored suede.

Luncheon with your best beau might be made more memorable in such a perfectly harmonizing ensemble as this: A slim ink black crepe, cloisterlike in its scant trimming of black sequin epaulettes encrusting the long sleeves, black pull-on gloves, platform soled sandals carrying out the coal-colored suede scheme, and two flashes of royal blue, one on handbag and one on sweeping felt hat.

Dinner dancing at your favorite haunt would achieve a new significance in this turn of the century ensemble: Inky black crepe forming a figure eight gown, its long tight sleeves relieved by the suggestiveness of a black net heart-shaped yoke and back, slinky black satin slippers, with golden soles, and shot with rhinestones, and a nosegay-sized bonnet. Glints of silvery blue eye shadow and cameo-like make-up create a feeling of carefully thought out harmony of effect.

This trend toward symphonic accord in clothing and accessories was presented by Emile, whose gowns were shown, accented by the make-up. Harmonizing slippers were from the Bootery, custom made millinery from the Shop Individual and gloves bag and jewelry from Camalier & Buckley.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 21.

THIS IS the month when New York kids stop playing cops-and-robbers and go in for the "Heigho, Silver" stuff. For it's rodeo time at Madison Square Garden, and the touring imitation of the old wild west has parked its broncs and its rough riders on Eighth avenue, where the bucking is usually done by our more antique taxis.

ALICE HUGHES

I went around back stage at the Garden the other day to look over the demon cowgirls who were on hand, just to see women who are women of the old school, and ran plumb into the queen of the troupe, the top glamor girl of the lady-buckeroos, a slim curly-haired cutie of the name of Alice Greenough, who hails from Red Lodge, Montana. I had words with her, and found the belle more interested in clothes than in hedge-hopping stock. Yep, she's a woman, pardner. Alice is the niftiest dresser in the troupe, and has no less than 15 sets of ring clothes, which she makes herself. The cow-belles call them "shirts and pants." The shirts are of the brightest possible satin, and the pants are tight around the hips and knees, flaring out at the cuff. The big felt hats are a flossy item, too, and cost around $30 an item. Moreover, La Greenough is fascinated by evening gowns, and she likes to go hoofing in fancy store clothes around the hot spots.

Yep—Alice is glamorous on a horse or afoot. But she works hard at her dizzy business. She's been in 22 rodeos this year. "The cowgirl who makes $3,000 a year in prizes is doing well," she told me. "And she has to pay her own expenses out of that. There's no insurance, because we can't get it."

I felt palsy with Alice, because the traffic cops call me the "cowgirl on wheels." I even asked her to share a ride on my buckin' fliv.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—First prize for the lovey-doviest pair of married movie stars goes without a contest to Stuart Erwin and June Collyer, who have been married for several years and have two nice tikes. They are just as devoted as though the honeymoon were new, and indeed, 'tis a right pretty sight, it is. That pretty Collyer girl used to live on Park avenue, and well I remember going to a journalistic tea-fight there now and then before she met up with Stu . . . .

How are the football special trains out your way? Coming back from New Haven with the Columbia maniacs after shellacking the big blue team of Yale, I found tha' the aisle of every car was jammed with wild kids shagging and strutting. Aunt Alice, who craved a drink of water mighty bad, just sat and moped in her corner. My mistake for wanting water, I could have had anything else without twitching . . . .

Ester Brown, of here, took some office-mates to court, charging "an extremely criminal conspiracy" to do her out of the $35 a week job she'd held for 16 years. She sued two of them for $50,000, alleging that they put a fan on the back of her neck, and made her catch cold, kept windows open, took away a radiator near her desk, locked her in a wash room, and many other heinous tricks. Ester says it was an office war, and she lost. Regular "persecution complex," a brain-picker might say . . . .

Heavy frosts these nights. But most lovely days.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Masculine Elysiums

The time he is in a new town before the wife and children arrive and when all the women in the hotel lobby and the girls in the office are still uncertain about his marital status.

The time he is traveling on a Pullman at the company's expense, tipping generously, dining luxuriously and receiving interested looks from the women passengers when he swaggers into the diner or observation car.

The time just after the wife and family have left on a month's vacation and he goes home with the gloriously free feeling that he can thro wpapers all over the house, have the boys in for a steak dinner, go downtown and raise as much Cain as he wants to—and possibly step out a little as a summer bachelor.

The day just after the wife and family get back from vacation and he comes home to an orderly house and a well-cooked meal and settles down before the radio in his house slippers, knowing that he will not have his routine upset for the next six months.

The first week when he sits behind the wheel of a brand-new motor car with the happy assurance that the right-hand tire in the back isn't a little weak; that the carbureter and spark plug can be absolutely depended upon; that there isn't a squeak anywhere, and that the next payment won't be due for 30 days.

The time his wife is entertaining her spinster friend who wants to hear all about how they make noodles down at his plant and the details of his record-breaking drive to Syracuse; who is deeply interested in his golf score and his nervous indigestion, and who simply adores the one about the two Eskimos and the one about the time he was selling lightning rods in Kansas.

The time he can go to his lodge convention—without his wife—and stand around smoking in the hotel lobbies with the other free souls watching pityingly his brethren in tow of determined groups of women.

When he can sit comfortably—and safely—in a ringside seat and watch some big bruiser whack another big bruiser.

The night he dreams he is shipwrecked on a South Sea island and finds himself the only man in a tribe of beautiful native women.

When he is just sick enough from a cold to stay home in bed and be as grouchy as he pleases while his wife, daughter, aunt and mother bring him delicacies and run eagerly when he calls.

The time on his vacation when he rows across a silvery lake in the dawn of a morning, casts his line and sits serenely in the enfolding solitude, feeling that all the things he does not like are so far —so very far—away.

Lacquering brass articles will give them that well kept look. To clean them, either wipe off with soft cloth or gently wash then in warm water and soap suds, and be careful not to remove the lacquer. The articles can easily be relacquered, however.

Cohan, Actor, Is Philosopher At C. U.

Says He Is 'Hack' Tells of Plays Is 'Play Doctor'

Self-styling himself "a hack-writer and a second-string play doctor," George M. Cohan—who also has what he might term a large-sized reputation as comedian and actor—became a serious philosopher yesterday afternoon at Catholic University and let the drama students in on his views of life in general.

Limping because of a broken toe and showing the effect of a hard week playing the President "right on the man's own stamping ground," Cohan declared: "I am a lonely, single-handed spectator watching a million-star company play the great, plotless plot called life."

"I recognize the hand of a Master Director behind it," he continued, "And if I am any critic, it is all a bully good show."

Glad He Brought 'Soft Shoes.'

After 51 years in the theater, Cohan declared he is glad he was "smart enough to bring my soft shoes along."

"It makes it possible for me to finish up as I started out—as a song and dance man," he said.

He complimented the university on its work in organizing and promoting the Blackfriar's Guild, declaring that if "someone doesn't do something, the theater is dead."

"I am told," he said, "that you produce original plays here. I hope you do. I have not seen an original play in some time."

Introduced as "First Actor"

Cohan termed "I'd Rather Be Right," in which he is the lead at the National Theater, "a brazen thing, in which I unfortunately bear the brunt, especially when we're in Washington."

He revealed that he had objected to playing two weeks here. "I would have been a big mistake. One week is quite enough," he said.

Introduced by Father Gilbert V. Hartke as president of the Catholic Theater Guild and the "first actor in America," Cohen declared he could claim to be the first actor on only one count. "I'm possibly the first to tear up a motion picture contract," he declared.

At the request of students and teachers, Cohan added two songs and a "serious little piece" from "Little Johnny Jones' to his talk as an encore. He sang "Over There" an dIndians and Trees." The students were so pleased with his appearance and in getting to shake his band afterward that all except one forgot to ask him for an autograph.

Village of 590 Aroused in Protest To Dial Phones

Burton, Ohio, Oct. 21 (AP).—Strenuous objections against installation of dial telephones were being made toda yby this village of 592. In a front page article, the Burton Leader said:

"In case of storms or accidents putting out the lights, one would be unable to dial in the dark. Under the present system central can be contacted easily.

"In case of serious fire, Burton would burn while someone was dialing all the telephone numbers of volunteer firement who answer calls."

have complete co-operation and co-ordination with the Federal Government. That transcends any political advantage of the moment."

"Why do you say Federal instead of the State government?" he was asked.

"Because I speak from four years' experience," the mayor replied. "There isn't a State in the Union that can go alone today."

The mayor's call preceded a luncheon conference between the President and Nathan Straus, head of the United States Housing Authority. Straus was understood to have reported that Federal funds for loans for slum clearance and low-cost housing were nearly exhausted and additional appropriations would have to be made if this program were to be continued.

Police Gquell Students After Harvard Pranks

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 21 (AP).—Student pranks inspired by a city council proposal to "divorce" Harvard from Cambridge subsided today after police detailed a tear gas squad to patrol streets near the university and President James Bryant Conant warned "disciplinary action" awaited disturbers.

Col Charles R. Apted, head of the university police, halted a "plebiscite" in the offices of the Harvard Advocate, a university publication, which printed ballots asking students to say whether they preferred separation from Cambridge.

U. S. Asks $3,715,907 From Ex-Bootlegger

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—The United States Attorney's office today filed suit in Federal Court against William V. Dwyer, race track figure, to collect $3,715,907 judgment for non-payment of income taxes.

The suit covers the period from 1922 to 1929 inclusive, except for 1926 when Dwyer was serving part of a 12-month sentence in Atlanta pentitentiary for violation of the Volstead act.

Driver Who Missed Pedestrian Fined

William H. Coachman, 30, colored, of the 900 block of Westminster street northwest, was found guilty in Traffic Court yesterday of failing to give the right of way to a boy crossing the entrance of an alley on H street northwest. The boy got across safely. Judge Hobart Newman fined Coachman $5.

to save a few steps. She crossed K street—one of the city's busiest thoroughfares—between Eighteenth and Nineteenth, pausing only to glare at autos which whizzed past on both sides. She and the little girl were lucky, too.

And then there was the woman on Georgia avenue—head down, fumbling with her purse—who came within inches of being run down by a light delivery truck. Her reaction to the close shave with death was to glance around to see if anyone saw her foolish move.

There were others—downtown, uptown and midtown—who preferred to chance a hazardous middle-of-the-block crossing rather than take a few extra moments to use cross-walks where they may rightfully demand the right-of-way.

The next most popular manner of becoming just another statistic in the District's fatality record is the pedestrial practice of stepping into the street from between two parked cars.

And ranking third in the causes of pedestrian deaths is the long-standing habit of walking against red signal lights.

Not only is Washington far behind Western cities in handling the pedestrian fatality problem, but it even ranks beneath the nearby community of Hagerstown, Md.

Some years ago, in the Hagerstown public square, the pedestrian death rate was rising to startling proportions. So, the city fathers instituted rules governing those afoot as well as those driving.

Hagerstown residents have learned how to walk. They know it means trouble to disobey a signal light or walk carelessly.

"And we haven't had a pedestrian fatality in the public square since the law went into effect," said a city official.

3-Judge Court Asked to Hear Plea in Coal Suit

Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the District Court of Appeals, yesterday was asked by opposing counsel to appoint a three-judge court to hear a motion for dismissal of a suit by the City of Atlanta, Ga., to enjoin enforcement and operation of the bituminous coal act of 1937.

The city, through its attorneys, J. C. Murphy, Atlanta, and Charles S. Rhyne, of Washington, contended the act was unconstitutional.

Robert W. Knox, general counsel of the commission, and Robert L. Stern, special assistant to the Attorney General, signed the motion for dismissal and the answer to the suit.

Hines, veterans administrator; Dr. Herbert Ramsey, public information chairman of the local medical society, and Dr. Rolland A. Case, president of the academy.

Karpis Lived at Ease While Police Hunted

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 21 (AP).—Two pretty young women, who identified themselves as former residents of Hot Springs houses of prostitution operated by Alvin Karpis' common law wife, Grace Goldstein, told a Federal Court jury today the public enemy and his gang members sojourned there in ease while they were targets of a Nationwide man hunt in 1935.

Testimony of Jewel Gilstrap and Della Jeffries were high spots in the day's proceedings against seven Hot Springs residents accused of conspiring to harbor Karpis. Karpis now is serving a life sentence at Alcatraz for kidnaping.

G-Men in New Mexico

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Oct. 21 (AP). Special agents of the criminal investigation division of the WPA carried ahead today the investigation into State WPA activities, culminated yesterday in wholesale indictments by a Federal grand jury.

Everett Grantham, United States district attorney, said five investigators were continuing in the field and indicated additional developments would be forthcoming in the Federal court term starting December 1.

Stanley W. P. Miller, assistant United States district attorney, among 73 persons of varying political and WPA rank indicted for conspiracy to use the WPA for political purposes, was relieved today of duty as a Federal attorney.

Chaves' Kin Suspended

Grantham suspended the young son-in-law of United States Senator Dennis Chavez at his own request, "pending the duration of the adjudication of charges made against me by the Federal grand jury," and to "relieve the department of any possible embarrassment."

A general reorganization of the State WPA was in progress, meanwhile, and acting Administrator R. L. Nicholson, of the Salt Lake City regional office, said administrative details would be announced Monday.

WPA investigators, it became generally known today, have been quietly gathering evidence for the grand jury since it was charged with the investigation September 7.

Foremen Named

Of the 73 persons, many of them State and Federal officials and political leaders, named in the blanket conspiracy indictments, about two-score were WPA administrative workers, foremen and timekeepers.

The defendants have been ordered to appear Tuesday before Federal Judge Colin Neblett, who ordered the grand jury inquiry.

Of those indicted, 62 were accused of conspiracy to defraud the Government for the purpose of "joint and unified political activity and to built a political organization." Of these, in addition to 11 others, 15 also were accused in separate counts of diverting to personal use WPA property and services, and coercing and intimidating relief recipients.

Williams' Statement

Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, issued a statement last night, declaring his organization had "co-operated fully" with other government agencies in the investigation which led to the New Mexico indictments.

"Our own investigators went into New Mexico and made a careful check on charges of improper political activity and maladministration of WPA in that State," Williams said. "The grand jury adjourned pending the results of this investigation. Immediately upon its completion the report was made available, together with all records desired by the jury.

"It has been our policy to investigate all such charges and to place the record in the hands of the proper authorities where any violations of law may be involved.

"The New Mexico cases are now before the court. Any further action on our part, pending judicial determination of these matters, would be improper. I wish to reiterate, however, that WPA is always ready and eager to bring to the attention of prosecuting authorities any violations of law indicated by ohr investigations."

Lansburgh Estate May Sell Assets

Justice Bailey yesterday authorized sale of assets of the Henry Lansburgh estate to raise money to pay $138,993 in bequests to 24 charitable institutions and three individual estates.

Mr. Lansburgh was an official of the Lansburgh & Bro. department store here until his death in 1925. His will disposed of a $250,000 estate among relatives and institutions with which he was connected in his career as a civic and fraternal leader.

Justice Bailey's order yesterday provided for sale of 664 shares of capital stock of the Lansburgh company, 85 shares of American Dairy Supply Co. stock, 5 shares of Concord Club stock and real estate at 1018 Vermont avenue northwest. Justice Bailey ordered the sale on the application of Solomon Lansburgh and Minnie Goldsmith, executors and trustees, who told the court the money was needed to pay off the bequests, on which some of the annuities were six years in arrears.

SPIES IN SKIRTS? Perhaps the most ungallant thing our State Department has been guilty of is to worry a little more about the charming foreign wives our emissaries abroad have acquired in their wanderings. Officials are definitely concerned.

Duchess of Athell . . . shushed

Two years ago foreign love matches without special permission were banned for our romantic envoys, but there are scores of American officials who have led fair furriners to the altar.

• • • •

This nervousness, of course, scarcely applies to Finnish, Swedish, Dutch and other non-authoritarian wives. It does apply to the fair ones whose dictators would not be above reminding them that the status of their relatives in the homeland might be affected by their turning in a tidbit or a soupcon of data occasionally, as only a wife can.

• • • •

Officials are also bothered —unofficially, of course—by the problem created when American girls marry foreign functionaries from the sputtering bellicose lands. It's beyond their power, naturally, to tell an American girl not on the U. S. payroll whom she can or can't marry.

• • • •

But it occurs to them that her husband's dictator might hint to her that hubby's career—and the welfare of his relatives—might depend on her zeal as an "observer."

American girls would rather slap a dictator's face than tell him anything.

But if you're an American colonel or admiral sitting on a love seat with an international charmer, you'd better feed her nothing but flattery. (Maybe foreign officials are worrying this way, too.)

POTOMAC MEDLEY: Hitler has been feeling too poor to go ahead with the new German Embassy, but now he may decide he can afford it . . . One of his chairs almost collapsed under me the other day . . . A downtown thermometer in the sun registered just 100 the other day—with the college boys in football scrimmage . . . Announcer Art Godfrey puts on a strange and somber dignity at the Inter-American Horse Show, but he does indulge himself a little meditation aloud occasionally.

• • • •

Even in this horsey Capital, some of the spectators at the Horse Show remain a little at sea . . . The observations run to learned comment like this: "See how he pats his horse even when it misses." . . . Some of the more cautious observers say something vague about "conformation" and let it go at that . . . There's a certain amount of eating of hot-dogs and drinking of pop, too; but I saw no one eating cotton candy.

• • • •

The President, in my opinion, was lured to see "Knickerbocker Holiday" not so much by the wisecracks as by the presence of an ancient Roosevelt in the cast of characters . . . He's a great ancestor worshiper.

• • • •

But politicians who dropped in to pick up a few gags for their campaign speeches found many of the gems, like "a slight financial sophistication backed by unlimited Government credit," a trifle subtle for the proletariat.

"—shushing the Duchess"

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: When that great lady, the Duchess of Athell, came to town, she was more officially and artistically shushed than any girl deserves to be . . .

First the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, tried to impress it on her—she isn't strictly Downing Street on Spain, Munich and Chamberlain—that Washington is an indiscreet place to speak indiscreetly.

In the Lincoln play, incidentally, young Herndon, Lincoln's law partner, reminded some Washingtonians of the young and ardent New Dealers who prod and maneuver their more placid or groping superiors toward crusades and utopias.

• • • •

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Lately "preserve democracy" has become the theme, the leitmotif, the refrain in Washington . . . Across 3,000 miles the goosestep echoes in miles of our Government corridors, an alarming noise . . . Precise, slow-speaking Brain-truster Ben Cohen is one of the few men who pronounces the word "ideological" correctly—with the first "i" short as in idiotic . . . The President brightened up when his favorite daughter-in-law, Betsy, came back to town for a few days . . . She may sublet the Jimmy Roosevelt house till the holidays.

Md. Guard Convicted in Fatal Beating

Two Others Acquitted Term Is Suspended Patient Died of Hurts

By the Associated Press.

Towson, Md., Oct. 21.—Three Circuit Court judges today acquitted two Spring Grove State Hospital guards of murder in the death of a patient, but found a third guilty of manslaughter.

The convicted guard, Elmer Albert Loveridge, 32, was given a suspended sentence of one year in the House of Correction. Those acquitted were Donald W. Walters, 24, and Oliver D. Corkran, 21.

All were accused of murder in the death of Harry Baumgartner, of Dundalk, 53-year-old Spring Grove patient. The State charged he died of peritonitis induced by a beating given him by the guards July 22 in a detention room following his attempt to escape.

In announcing their verdict, Judges T. Scott Offutt, C. Gus Grason and William H. Lawrence declared "there was no intention on the part of the defendants to perpetrate a homicide."

Loveridge, the convicted guard, and Corkran admitted they struck the patient. Walters denied he hit him, but Corkran testified Walters hit the patient once. Physicians had said blows on the abdomen led to Baumgartner's death.

The guards said Baumgartner struggled when they captured him after his escape from one of the buildings and took him to a "shutter" room used to quiet obstreperous patients. No one struck him, they said, until he resisted them.

Loveridge broke into tears as the court concluded: "The verdict is not guilty of murder, but guilty of manslaughter."

Sportsmen Pledged Aid By O'Conor

Will Stop Fee Drain 'Politics' to Be Out Lauds Game Board Talks at Frederick

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 21.—Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, Democratic nominee for governor, promised sportsmen and anglers tonight that if elected, he would "do all that is in my power" to protect their interests "from political invasion."

In an address prepared for a Democratic mass meeting here, O'Conor discussed the State game department and pledged himself to stop diversion of this department's funds to the general treasury and to segregate special funds for fish and game "so that the sportsmen and anglers of the State may each receive the full benefit of these license fees."

"The accomplishments of the game department, which department was provided for by a democratic governor, have been the subject of commendation," said O'Conor. He listed what it had done in the way of breeding and distributing game, providing soil cover and establishing sanctuaries.

"The State game department, within the conservation commission, was very wisely placed under the merit system, and I would hesitate to make chances which might disrupt the satisfactory operation of the department," O'Conor said.

"Certainly, the most careful study must be pursued before radical changes are made, and unless a demonstrable saving can thereby be effected. I do think, however, that there are many sound reasons for consolidating the propagation and protection of fresh water fish within the State game department.

"The State game departmen is financed entirely by the proceeds of hunters' licenses. These are dedicated funds, but in 1934 and 1935, some $64,000 were diverted to the general treasury. If elected Governor, I promise that there shall be no more diversions of these funds.

In conclusion, O'Conor said:

"I desire to say ta the sportsmen and anglers of Maryland, that I am in full sympathy with their aims and objectives, and that I believe in the preservation of the means whereby they may pursue their traditional and healthful sports.

"If elected Governor, I shall do all that is in my power to see that their interests, which are the interests of all Nature lovers, are protected from political invasion."

West Virginians' Votes From Here To Be Challenged

The votes of several thousand West Virginians now residing in Washington may be challenged November 8 if they are cast in the customary absentee fashion, according to Republican election officials in Charles Town.

Each absentee voter will have to prove that he is, in fact, a citizen of the State, it was said, and after he has done so his name will be reported to the State tax commissioner for collection of the West Virginia income tax, payable by every legal resident of the State regardless of where the income is earned.

There are approximately 11,000 West Virginia Democrats in Washington, and the West Virginia Democratic Club has established headquarters in the Raleigh Hotel for the purpose of advising absentee voters.

Clarence W. Meadows, Democratic attorney general of the State, has held that legal residence for voting purposes "is to be determined largely by his (the voter's) intention" to return to the county where he seeks to vote.

New State Bar Rules Issued; Body of 40 Lawyers to Reign

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 21 (AP).—Regulations for the practice of law in Virginia were issued by the State Supreme Court of Appeals at a special session here today.

A council of 40 lawyers will directly govern the State bar. This council, composed of one representative from each of the 34 circuits of the State, and six attorneys appointed from the State-at-large by the supreme court of appeals, will meet in Richmond December 13 to elect a president, vice president and secretary-treasurer to serve until August 31, 1939.

Members of the State bar will meet annually, on or before September 1, to elect officers for that organization.

The rules promulgated today were changed but little from the regulations recommended by the court's committee composed of Justices Edward W. Hudgins, George L. Browning and Herbert B. Gregory. This committee drafted the rules after conferring with the committee of 40 lawyers.

The rules define the practice of law, and in this respect are of interest to bankers, real estate operators, accountants and others, in addition to attorneys.

In this connection, the rules read in part:

"Generally, the relation of attorney and client exists, and one is deemed to be practicing law, whenever he furnishes to another advice or service under circumstances which imply his possession and use of lega. knowledge or skill."

Asthon Dovell, of Williamsburg, speaker of the House of Delegates and chairman of the sub-committee for defining practice of the law, said his committee decided that "what is needed is the safeguarding of the relationship of attorney and client from abuses to the client from the attorney" and that a "reasonable safeguard should require proper training, education and a peculiar discipline by constituted authority governing the acts and conduct of the attorney."

Private Colleges Declared Chief Stronghold of Liberty

Growing Federal Aid Alarms University Heads 'Will Embroil Higher Education in Politics' Educators Discuss Trend at Va. Conference

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 21.—Colleges on private foundations are "among the regional conference of the American Association of Colleges was told today.

Both Dr. John L. Seaton, president of Albion College, Michigan, and president of the American Association of Colleges, and President F. W. Boatwright of the University of Richmond, the host school, looked with concern upon the Federal Government's increasingly large role in higher education.

Federal control would "embroil" higher education in politics, Dr. Seaton asserted at the opening session of the appearance this afternoon, while President Boatwright in his address prepared for tonight's dinner meeting said "it is the vast and increasing Federal aid with its threat of centralized control that arouses fear and alarm in our democracy."

Both were outspoken in their praise of the independent, privately endowed colleges and universities. Said President Seaton:

"Certain colleges not connected directly with Federal or State governments are among the chief and perhaps the last strongholds of liberty in this generation."

Along the same lines, President Boatwright told the conference that independent colleges, free from political dictation, "have been forums of free expression."

Frankly recognizing "pressing problems" of independent colleges, President Boatwright said many of the schools on private foundations are doomed to an early death. Their difficulties, he said, are caused by low interest rates which drastically curtail the revenue from endowments, by governmental tax policies, and by "undue" Federal aid to State institutions.

Hatfield Feud Slaying Denied By Accused Man

Welch, W. Va., Oct. 21 (AP).—A slaying which the State claimed was an outbreak of a Hatfield-Dunford mountain feud of years standing was emphatically denied today by Blaine Hagerman, 25.

Hagerman, on trial for the shotgun killing of Jim Dunford, on Johnnycake Creek several months ago, testified that at the hour Dunford died he was at home.

Prosecutor Samuel Christie contended before the jury that an old hatred between the Hatfields and the Dunfords was responsible for the slaying.

Hagerman had married into the Hatfield family, Christie argued, and made its quarrels his own.

Va. Football Fans Warned to Avoid Racing on Roads

Richmond, Va., Oct. 21 (AP).—Mix in a bit of the more leisurely "horse and buggy" days with our present days of scurrying was the advice today of Col. Marion S. Battle, director of the State division of motor vehicles.

To the football fans driving to games tomorrow, Col. Battle suggested:

Leave a little earlier to avoid racing over crowded highways; returning home avoid trying to beat the other fellow back to the warming fire and cheering cup.

Autumn, bringing gay colors to Virginia trees, also brings a hazard for motorists with slippery leaves on the roads, Col. Battle said.

Nice Claims Jackson Was 'Bunk' Victim

Defends Beaten Rival 'Intrigue' Charged Democrat Harmony? Reports Discounted

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Oct. 21.—Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, defeated in the Democratic gubernatorial primary, was defended tonight by Republican Gov. Harry W. Nice against "political bunk and intrigue" he said was perpetrated by Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, Democratic nominee for governor, and his backers.

In an address prepared for a party rally in the armory here, Nice scoffed at what he termed a "subtle inference" by Howard Bruce, financial backer of O'Conor, that Jackson used the mayoralty "for the benefit of his business or his personal fortunes."

He also belittled what he termed efforts of "the Little General's faction" to have "us believe that everything is harmony within the Democratic ranks."

Describing Jackson as "a very good and a very dear friend of mine," Nice said he would have "felt it a distinguished honor to have been opposed" by the Baltimore mayor, but added O'Conor is his opponent and O'Conor "is going to lose this election."

"I want to ask Mr. O'Conor why his sudden change of heart about my good friend, Howard?" Nice said.

"Many sins, my friends, have been committed in the name of politics, but neither Mr. O'Conor's financial backer, nor Mr. O'Conor himself can convince me that Howard W. Jackson ever took a dishonest penny in his life or ever used his high office in any fashion or in any form, for the benefit of his business or his personal fortunes.

"Aided by his ally, the Baltimore Sunpapers, the Little General's faction would like us to believe that everything is harmony within the Democratic ranks.

"Following the so-called peace rally last week, the Baltimore Sunpapers headlined the news that the mayor was prominent in the party rally.

"As a matter of fact, the mayor was taking a much-needed rest the night of the rally, and was not within 100 miles of the Auditorium Theater, the rallying point."

Children's Farm Exhibit Opens At Lynchburg

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 21 (AP).—School children from seven counties flocked to Lynchburg in holiday mood today for this city's Fourth Annual Farm Show, an agricultural exhibit unique in Virginia.

Last year an estimated 2,000 children attended from the participating counties—Amherst, Appomattox, Bedford, Buckingham, Campbell, Charlotte and Nelson.

All schools in the participating counties suspended today.

Chilean Horse Wins Honors in Inter-American

18 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1938 ★★★

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

"Anyone who had seen the Washington Redskins play twice could easily recognize Columbia's plays as Redskin plays."

That line is out of the New York Times, the comment of its No. 1 football writer following Columbia's sensational last-half victory over West Point by a 20-18 score. The inference was plain enough. Cliff Battles, the Redskins' All-Pro League halfback of 1932-1937, is the current coach of Columbia's backfield in his capacity as assistant to Lou Little. The Redskin plays that Battle knew so well he had transfused into the Columbia system.

POVICH.

And now we take you into Griffith Stadium on the afternoon of October 1. Georgetown is playing Hampden-Sidney and a half dozen Redskin players are sitting in the stands.

"Jeez, lookit that," exclaimed a Redskin back. "That Hampden-Whatzis club is using our No. 63. They're butchering it, but they're using it, nevertheless. And in the first half they lined up like we did on the short punt formation."

"That's nothing," interrupted another Redskin. "You should've seen that club that was in here last week from Virginia. They had our formations down pat. They tried to lift everything we've got."

It's a fact, Redskin plays are being swiped by college coaches round about. It's perfectly permissible, of course, but it shows a trend. It is a form of flattery that is by no means subtle. Redskin plays are coming to be regarded as plays that are synonymous with smart football, highly original stuff and the ultra ultra in effectiveness.

And who is the originator of these Redskin plays? Perhaps we'd better introduce you all over again to a modest, soft spoken, shy, freckled-faced, red-headed fellow named Ray Flaherty. He is listed as head coach of the Redskins. And, as the saying goes, he is a potent package.

He Lives Football

If there is a thought in Ray Flaherty's head outside of football from July to January, one would never suspect it. For six months of the year he is imedded in the game. His waking moments consist of a large order of football, and even in his trundle bed visions of the dream play dance in his nimble mind.

He has his own ideas about running a footbal team. Schooled in the play of the New York Giants, with whom he was an all-pro end for several years, Flaherty did not regard the Giants' style of play as sacred when he took the job as coach of the Redskins two years ago. He virtually scrapped 'em. Four times in the last two years he has sent his Redskin teams against Steve Owens' Giants and three times his Redskins have triumphed.

In Spokane, Wash., 35 years ago, Flaherty was born. As a lean, gangling, red-headed kid he starred with Spokane High's football teams, and at Conzaga University, in his junior and senior years, he was an all-Coast end. It was at Gonzaga that young Flaherty met up with his coaching model, Gus Dorais.

Dorais, Knue Rockne's old teammate at Notre Dame, and now oach at the University of Detroit, is tops among football coaches as far as Flaherty is concerned. Never does the Redskin boss, now famous himself as coach of the world champion professionals, miss an opportunity for a session with Dorais.

A Real Jam Session

In swing parlance, the Dorais Flaherty conclaves are jam sessions. They mutilate tablecloths, wear down pencils with their discussions of new and original plays and their estimates of other football systems and football players. They leave a trail of those curious little circles and chicken feet madks that football coaches use to plot out plays.

When in trouble, Flaherty goes to Dorais. If he wants a team scouted, and no mere routine couting job will do, he asks Dorais to do it for him, please. It was Dorais who, last year, scouted the Giants, the Packers and the Bears for Flaherty. And the old Notre Damer is proud of the accomplishments of his favorite pupils.

Dorais it was who recommended Andy Farkas to Flaherty, tabbing him as "sure fire and the guy you'll need with Cliff Battles gone." And it was Dorais who submitted a report on Bill Hartman that caused Flaherty to tear up the original contract offered Hartman and insert a huge salary raise, purely on Dorais' say so.

The final whistle of one ball game is not, for Flaherty, the end of the ball game. It is the beginning of a week of preparation for the next battle. Begrudgingly he gives his athletes the traditional Monday-off, but only begrudgingly, because it hurts him. To Flaherty, it is the waste of a day.

Hitler may engineer Anschluss with Austria, the Czechs can give up the Sudetenland, Corrigan can fly around the world on toy balloons motored by a drug store electric fan. But if it happens between July and January, Ray Flaherty is apt not to notice it. He doesn't have the time. He's thinking about the crazy way a football can bounce.

Cards Battle Bobcats Here Today; Maryland Faces Virginia Eleven

6 Sophomores Start Kick-Off at 2:30 Bobcats on Upgrade

By Jack Munhall.

Six sophomores will be in the revamped Catholic University line-up this afternoon when the Cardinals hit the comeback trail against West Virginia Wesleyan at C. U. Stadium. Game time is 2:30 o'clock.

Nettled by his team's ineffective offense when it lost to Detroit, 27-0, two weeks ago, Coach "Dutch" Gergman has been hard at work, experimenting with various line-ups in a effort to hit upon a winning combination.

Now he believes he has that combination and he is eager to note its reaction to the stubborn opposition expected to come from the Bobcats. Th eBobcats, though their record of one victory in three games is hardly complimentary to their ability, loom as a real test for the rebounding Cardinals and should give them a close battle.

That the Bobcats are on the upgrade is attested by their feat of holding Duquesne to a 13-0 score last week. Since the Dukes' only defeat was administered by Pittsburgh, the Nation's No. 1 eleven, the Bobcats considered their performance a moral victory.

Rocco Pirro, former fullback and tackle and now designated as Catholic's regular quarterback, is an important cog in the backfield and on his ability to provide the backfield blocking so sadly lacking in C. U.'s two previous games rests much of Bergman's hope for an improved attack.

Pirro, a 200-pounder, is expected to be the blocking quarterback that the Notre Dame system demands, for his work along that line last season when he was at fullback was excellent.

Pirro's switch from tackle to quarterback, the shift of Al Calabrese from end to guard, the elevation of Wayne Ambrose to fill Calabrese's vacated position and the replacing of Capt. and End John Kasunich by Joe Carrig are the changes in C. U.'s lineup.

Brown Will Start Gillette Marked Man College Park Scene

Confident with the eleventh-hour return of Bob Brown, 216-pound tackle, that it can bottle Virginia's great back, Jim Gillette, Maryland University has high hopes of springing an upset at College Park this afternoon when the schools meet in the seventeenth renewal of a colorful and traditional rivalry. The kick-off is set for 2:30 o'clock.

Since the rivals began to meet annually in 1925, Maryland has won seven times, Maryland twice and two games have been ties.

Virginia, though heavily favored today, will have to break a precedent to carry home a victory. In six games with the Terps at College Park, Virginia cannot show a single victory, its best performances being a pair of ties.

Virginia will bring a fine seasonal record to College Park. It has defeated Washington and Lee, 13-0; tied V. M. I., 12-12, and has only lost to Navy.

Maryland, handicapped by a seemingly ceaseless string of injuries, has been disappointing, bowing to Richmond, Syracuse and Jenn State before snapping its losing streak by beating Western Maryland, 13-8. In that game, however, the Terps showed definite signs that they are ready to justify optimistic preseason forecasts. With Quarterback Charley Weidinger back in the lineup, Maryland's attack was much more versatile and its passing game full 50 per cent more effective.

It is on the skillful right arm of Weidinger that the Terps base most of their hope for an upset over Virginia.

Two Terps who were chiefly instrumental in the 3-0 victory Maryland scored over Virginia last season will be on the sidelines today. Pershing Mondorff, whose field goal in the waning minutes of the game provided the victory margin, and Jim Meade, the game's leading ground-gainer are both unable to play. Meade has a broken ankle and Mondorff is convalescing from an appedectomy.

Little Hoyas Play Deadlock With St. Albans Eleven

Two undefeated unscored-on elevens battled to a scoreless tie yesterday as Georgetown prep team gained a moral victory over St. Albans on the latter's field. It was the first time in five years the Little Hoyas emerged without a defeat against the Saints.

Both teams possessed strong defenses and were well matched throughout. Only one real threat occurred and it was aided by a 15-yard penalty.

Late in the second quarter after Alexander punted to the Georgetown 40-yard line, Eckridge, prep back, whipped a 20-yard pass to Divine and the ball moved into Albans territory. It was Eckridge again and he smashed the left side of the line for 12 yards to the 20. Here Heidicooper, substitute lineman, intercepted a Georgetown pass, thrown by Marty Kuntz.

The Georgetown drive seemed to be over, but when St. Albans foundered in line plunges, they kicked and it was blocked by a Little Hoya end, Bill Divine.

Kuntz, on successive line smashes, moved the ball to the 18-yard stripe where a 15-yard penalty for unnecessary roughness placed the ball 3 yards from the goal. Three line-smashes and a pass failed to find a hole in the Saints' stalwart defense.

The remainder of the game was dull and for the most part played between the two 30-yard lines. The kicking of Big Bill Alexander, who got off a 65-yard punt once in the contest was commendable and also the defensive play of Neville Weir, 265-pound Blue and White lineman.

Princeton Is Favored Over Navy; Jaspers Will Test Georgetown

50,000 Fans Expected Mountain Leads Tiger Middies Are Ready

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Oct. 21.—A swashbuckling crew of Navy gridmen, anxious to hang Princeton's football hopes from the halyards, weighed anchor tonight and prepared to cast off for Baltimore, where tomorrow they pit their skill against the high-riding Tigers in one of the East's major football attractions.

Fifty thusand fans, including the entire regiment of midshipmen, will see the game, which has assumed added importance in view of the Tigers' stunning and convincing triumph over Penn last week. Navy, humbled by a surprisingly potent Yale aggregation last week, will be the underdog tomorrow, but a ferocious underdog and a sentimental favorite with the audience.

Princeton's chances have been hit somewhat by a flurry of illness and late injuries to the squad. Bob Jackson, Coach Tad Wieman's ace quarterback; Dick Wells, another signal caller; and Wes Pullen, reserve guard, appear to be definitely out of action. Harry Dixon will start in Jackson's pace and while a capable pilot, does not measure up to Jackson's ability.

Navy scouts were impressed with the line play of big Bob Tierney at left tackle; and Howard Casey, center, and much of Navy's practice this week was devoted to devising ways and means of keeping this pair out of the Middy backfied. Tierney is regarded as a possible All-American selection.

Tom Mountain, Princeton's captain and right halfback, represents the Tigers' major offensive threat. Mountain, who broke off tacke and sprinted 57-yards for a score against Penn last week, is a triple-threat star in every sense of the word, and will be a marked man tomorrow.

Navy is pinning its hopes on "Bullet" Wood's line-plunging Lem Cooe's passing to pull it through to victory. Wood has been the best ball carrier wearing the Blue and Gold this autumn, while Cooke has borne the brunt of the passing and punting. Al Bergner, Navy's great tackle, is still in sick bay, but if Tom McGrath acquits himself as well at Bernger's post tomorrow as he did last week, the Middies will have no protest on that score.

The psychological advantage in this game is with Navy. Observers feel that the Tigers may sucer a letdown after their gruelling battle with Penn, while Navy will be playing over its head to atone for the Yale loss. At any rate they expect a close, hard and possibly thrilling encounter.

The Midshipmen will parade on the gridiron at 1:15 o'clock, leaving the Academy tomorrow morning at 11:30 a. m. They will present their colorful card stunts between halves. Princeton is sending more than 1,000 undergraduate to the game in special trains, as well as its large and rhythmic band.

Hoyas Are Favored Squad Holds Workout Air Raid Expected

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Oct. 21.—Georgetown University's undefeated eleven, hailed as the school's greatest since the days of Lou Little, arrived here today and put in a light workout preparatory to meeting Manhattah at Yankee Stadium tomorrow in its first real test of the season.

Piling up a total of 117 points against only 6 for the opposition, Georgetown will enter the game a pronounced favorite over the inconsistent Jaspers by virtue of successive victories over Hampden-Sydney, Roanoke and Randolph-Macon. Though in each game the opposing team has been of inferior caliber, Georgetown showed great potential strength and New York alumni are highly enthusiastic of its chance to revenge Manhattan's 20-12 victory scored last season in Washington.

Manhattan, touted as unusually strong because of its great sophomore team of 1937, has been more or less a disappointment to date, losing to St. Bonaventure's and Holy Cross. The Jaspers have defeated Providence and Niagara.

Georgetown players who prepped in the metropolitan area are expected to play a prominent role in deciding tomorrow's game. Tackle Joe Frank, Fullback Myron Darmohray and Guard Jim Hill, all certain to see some action played with New York high school elevens while Jules Koshlap, sensational sophomore forward passer; Augie Lio, guard; Jim Reichey, center; Jim Castiglia, fullback, and Martin Ostinato, center, are products of New Jersey high schools.

Maj. Yanez Rides Mount To Victory

Competition Is Keen U. S. Entry Third Events Colorful Villarreal Beaten

By Hotspur

Colo Colo, beautifully ridden by Maj. Eduardo Yanez, of the Chilean army horse show team, won the individual military championship of the Inter-American Horse Show at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club yesterday.

It was the scintillating high spot on the second day's program. It brought together the greatest jumping horses of army teams of Chile, Mexico and the United States. It was a collision of ambitions, an affair of honor, to the army officers of three nations. Each team had its heart set on winning the Chilean Cup, presented as an emblem of individual international jumping excellence by Chief Gen. Oscar Novora Fuentes of the Chilean army.

This event was run over course "G," which most anyone would call brutal. It is composed of 15 jumps, every one a mean test for the most fearless horse and rider. The round of these jumps—no little 4-foot-6 affairs—must be completed within 1 minute and 22 seconds or the rider is penalized by faults being added to his score.

U. S. Seeks Second Leg

The United States Army team had all its top horses entered in an attempt to outstrip its rivals and get another leg on the cup won last year by gallant old Joe Aylshire, 22-year-old veteran of the United States Army team. The great internationalist, Dakota Dinger, the bay gelding that won victory for the Army team on the first day of competition; Masquerader and Don each failed on some one jump, each having four faults. Both Dakota and Don knocked down the top bar on the last jump of the course.

The Mexican team's celebrated Donaji had won the trophy in 1936 with Capt. Villarreal in the saddle and the Mexicans also were avid for a second leg on the Chilean Cup. Their entries were back in the rut except Azteca, the bay gelding top horse of the Mexican team. Capt. Zapet took Azteca over the course with a clean performance, but he was penalized 1¼ faults for being 7 seconds over the time limit.

The Chileans were all in the rear until Maj. Eduardo Yanez started his superlative riding in the last stages of the event. Maj. Yenaz, one of the finest riders ever to grace American show rings, and also one of the ablest and most popular horsemen ever to appear in Washington, seemed to have clearly outshone the officers on the other army teams by two clean performances on Colo Colo and Toqui.

Clipped Wings Cuts In

Then Clipped Wings, an old Washington favorite of the Fort Myer Horse Show team, electrified the crowd by a clean performance that matched those of the Chilean horses. It was at the eleventh hour that Capt. "Johnny" Hines by superb riding took the 10-year-old bay mare so faultlessly over the course, which meant a three-horse jumpoff between Colo Colo, Toqui and Clipped Wings.

The jumps were raised; the Toronto bank to 6 feet, the hogs back and the post and rail to 5 feet 6 inches. The cheers of the crowd encouraged the gallant Maj. Yanez as he rode Colo Colo over each successive obstacle in the grandest bit of riding at this show and finished with a clean performance.

Clipped Wings was the last hope of the United States Army fans, and it was a great effort Capt. Hines made to equal Colo Colo's performance. He almost did it. Just one of Clipped Wings' hooves struck a rail that wavered, then fell, and the hopes of the United States Army went a-glimmering. Maj. Yanez had a fine performance on Toqui with three faults which placed that beautiful dark chestnut gelding second, Clipped Wings third with four faults and Azteca, of the Mexican team, took fourth place. Senora Izurieta presented the cup to her compatriot, Maj. Yanez.

Protest to Victor

The hunter hack was first class on that portion of the Inter-American Horse Show postponed by yesterday's rainstorm. It was won by Protest, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's beautiful bay gelding, ridden by Mrs. Billy Weatherall. Randle's Find, a bay gelding three-year-old, owned and ridden by United States Randle, placed second; Charles Carrio's Recall was third, and fourth was Hunter's Choice, owned by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh and ridden by Blakeley Lodge.

Rivaling the Army teams in point of stiff competition and class of horses entered, the battle for State team jumping supremacy got off to a hair-raising start. The teams representing New York, Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia started a three-day battle.

A contest between State teams in any sport is a novelty. City, school and college teams vie for championship honors, sectional championships abound, but it was left to the officials of the Inter-American to inaugurate two years ago a contest between State teams for the jumping honors. A trophy was put up called the Governor's Cup which has come to represent to horsemen what the America's Cup means to the yachting world.

Two Virginia teams, No. 1, the entry of Morris A. Clark, and U. S.

Middleburg Hounds At Horse Show

What was a satisfying let down after the intense excitement of the individual military championship was the entrance into the show ring of the celebrated Middleburg hounds led by that famous huntsman Bob Matlox. This pack has won more prizes and other honors than any other pack in America. The beautifully disciplined hounds each in the pink of condition and groomed to the nth degree trotting along with the huntsman and the whippers was a colorful break in an afternoon of stark competition.

G. W. Scores 27-to-0 Victory Over Davis-Elkins at Stadium

Vic Sampson, Nowaskey Are Stars

Fourth Victory
Visitors Heavier
6,000 See Game
G. W. Line Tough

By Jack Munhall.

Little Vic Sampson, a fleet halfback, and big Bob Nowaskey, an equally fleet end, formed an odd but fearsome scoring combination last night to propel George Washington further along the unbeaten trail with a 27-0 victory over a heavier but thoroughly outclassed Davis-Elkins team at Griffith Stadium.

Sampson and Nowaskey each scored two tourhdowns and Tony Barauskas, a substitute tahkle, picked up two more points by tackling Melvin Sharps berind the Davis-Elkins goal line for a safety.

Sampson, one of the East's leading ground gainers last season, thrilled the crowd of 6,000 by racing 61 yards to a touchdown in the third quarter after he had given his team a 6-0 lead in the first by plunging over from the two after a sustained drive of 74 yards.

The second and fourth George Washington touchdowns were credited to Nowaskey, who took a 30-yard pass from Billy Richardson in the second quarter to step an additional 3 yards to score and then on an end-around play zipped over the pay-dirt stripe on a 7-yard run in the fourth.

Ken Batson added a point after the fourth touchdown.

The stalwart George Washington line preserved its record of not having allowed the opposition a single touchdown this season and indeed the visitors' scoring threats were few and far between. They never penetrated past the Colonials' 22-yard line until the fourth quarter when they reached the 5 against a combination of second and third string Colonials.

It was George Washington's fourth straight victory.

FIRST QUARTER—G. W. kicked off to Mike Winnie, of Davis and Elkins, who returned the ball from the 5 to the D. and E. 16. Art Tebor passed to Bob Hudson for 34 yards and a first down on the G. W. 46, but both teams were off sides and the play was nullified. Davis and Elkins' Hudson punted to Vic Simpson who returned from the G. W. 18 to the 32. Failing to gain on three running plays through the line, Sampson kicked to the visitors' and Center John Simpson returned to the G. W. 45. Hudson punted from his own 47 to the G. W. 3 where the ball was downed by Hudson. Sampson kicked to Tebor who came back from the D. and E. 40 to the D. and E. 48. Hudson kicked out on the G. W. 38. But on a peculiar ruling the visitors' were given the ball and a first down on the 27 because G. W. was clipping while the kick was in the air. Hudson smashed through the line to the 18, and Jim Smith made it a first down on the 17. But after two passes and a running play which netted a 5-yard loss, the D. and E. threat ended when Smith's try for field goal from the 22 failed by inches. Bob Nowaskey, on an end around play, reeled off a 19-yard gain for the longest run of the quarter and a first down on the G. W. 41 but a series of penalties stopped the Colonials.

Score: George Washington, 0; Davis-Elkins, 0.

SECOND QUARTER

George Washington's hard-running backs began to smash through the visitors' heavier line with greta success as the quarter opened. The Colonials took the ball on their own 16 after an exchange of kicks and in exactly 11 plays rushed over a touchdown. After a 21-yard gain by Lud Urick and a 24-yard run by Frank Merka, who was knocked out on the D. and E. 2½-yard line, Sampson plunged over. The try for extra point failed when D. and E. intercepted Nowasky's pass intended for Merka.

Score—George Washington, 6; Davis and Elkins, 0.

Smith, fleet Davis and Elkins back, electrified the stands by bulling his way through the center of the Colonials' line for a 44-yard run to place the ball on the G. W. 28. The Colonials' rugged line smothered three running plays and G. W. took the ball on downs on its own 21. Tom Grady, Billy Richardson, Ken Batson and Stanford Carriere formed a new G. W. backfield.

With a fresh set of backs in the game, the Colonials suddenly struck through the air for their second touchdown. A 37-yard run by Batson moved the ball from the G. W. 20 to the D. and E. 33. Here, on the next play, Richardson passed 20 yards to Nowaskey for the score. Nowaskey's placement was wide.

THIRD QUARTER

George Washington received the kickoff opening the second half on its own 35. After a gain of 4 yards by Booth, Sampson broke loose on an end run and raced 61 yards for the Colonials' third touchdown. It was a spectacular play with the fleet Sampson outdistancing several Davis and Elkins players to cross the goal line standing up and with no one as close as 10 yards to his tying feet.

Nowaskey's placement attempt failed.

Score: George Washington, 18; Davis and Elkins, 0.

After an exchange of punts, George Washington opened up with a strong running attack, featured by Ken Batson's 13-yard run and a gain of 26 yards by Nowaskey on an end around play, to move from its 45 to the Davis and Elkins' 17 in five plays. Booth, on a reverse, fought his way to the 10 and Batson made it a first down on the 6. On the next play Batson going through the line, fumbled, but recovered for a ½-yard loss. Nowaskey crossed up the visitors by taking the ball from Fred Sartore and sweeping around right end for another touchdown. With Grady holding the ball Batson converted from placement.

Just before the period ended, Urick intercepted Tebor's pass from the D. and E. 47 on the G. W. 48 and got back to the D. and E. 43.

Score: George Washington, 25; Davis and Elkins, 0.

Fourth Quarter

On the second play of the quarter Sartore ran 38 yards for a touchdown, which was refused when the referee detected a G. W. man clipping. Milbrady, substitute Davis and Elkins center, stopped the Colonials' goalward drive by scooping up Sartore's fumble on his own 43. Davis and Elkins then opened up with a bewildering passing attack that carried to the G. W. 6 before it died when Tabor's fourth-down pass to Hudson in the end zone was incomplete.

After taking the ball on downs, George Washington on sheer power marched from its own 20 all the way to the Davis and Elkins 11 before a pair of passes by Richardson fell incomplete and the Southerners took the ball. On the next play a bad pass from center sailed over Sharp's head over the Davis and Elkins goal line and when Sharp tried to run out he was tackled by Tony Barauskas, substitute Colonial tackle, for a safety and 2 points.

Score: George Washington, 27; Davis and Elkins, 0.

100-Yard Touchdown Run Features Game
Gonzaga Scores 13-7 Win Over Wash.-Lee

An intercepted pass and a spectacular 100-yard dash from goal to goal marked the closing minutes of the Inter-High series clash between Roosevelt and Western yesterday, as the latter wound up on the long end of a 19-13 score.

With about 1,000 student grid fans looking on and the timekeeper's gun poised to end the game, Frank (Yank) Laddbush gambled on being the goat in Roosevelt's loss and intercepted one of George Barnes' passes on his own goal line. Roosevelt blockers quickly strung out in front of him and he raced the length of the field to tally his team's second touchdown. It was perhaps the neatest bit of broken field running and actual speed the series has displayed to date.

Western, however, was never in very serious danger of losing the lead it snapped up as the opening whistle blew. Taking an intercepted pass on the first running play of the game, Barnes, Western half, streaked to Roosevelt's 8-yard line to set up the first goal, and after two tries, Fred Stone, quarterback, accounted for the first six points.

Again Western struck in the first quarter. Substitute Back Hillary, after a down-field march to Roosevelt's 3-yard stripe, picked up one yard in each of two attempts at the line and finally plunged over. O'Hanlon, regular placement kicker of Western, missed this placement as he did the first.

Despite the closeness of the score, Roosevelt was outplayed during the entire game. Its first touchdown came from what might have been termed a lucky break. The score standing at 12-0 against them in the second period, Rooseveltmen took the ball on downs on its own 41 when Western's attack had temporarily bogged down. Twice George Zuras, halfback, hurled long passes to Danny Boothe, end, and the ball was knocked from his hands. On the third attempt, however, Boothe was able to hold on and he slithered down the sidelines to score.

In the matter of yardage gain, Western deserved the victory. It piled up a total of eight first downs to Roosevelt's four. In the aerial department, too, the Red Raiders were superior. Of the seven passes attempted Western completed five, while Roosevelt attempted 19 and only completed four.

The fact Roosevelt was able to stem the Western tide as it did was probably due to Coach William Woodworth's shifting of Fullback Dick Metzler from his former position to guard on the defensive and end on the offensive. The lanky player blasted through the line and stopped numerous Western plays before they started. Boothe, of Roosevelt, also played a fine game, both offensively and defensively. Besides the stellar play of Barnes and Hilary in the backfield, Western boasted a pair of ends, O'Hanlon and Fields, who worked admirably.

Gonzaga Is Victor Over Wash.-Lee

The purple of Gonzaga came from behind in a hard-fought grid contest with Washington-Lee's Little Generals yesterday and won, 13-7. The Arlington school was host.

Bracing itself after the Generals had marked up a 7-point lead in the first quarter, Gonzaga, aided by a convenient Washington-Lee fumble on its own 38-yard line, moved down the field, adding first down after first down until the goal was scored. It was Jimmy Walsh, backfield ace, who furnished the final drive. The placement was good and the score was knotted at 7-all.

As the second half began the Gonzagans were still in a scoring frame of mind. Gardiner backed up to his own 25-yard stripe and hurled a long pass to Substitute Shea, the shifty end going to Washington-Lee's 15 before being stopped. From that point it was comparatively simple for Walsh to plunge over for another, and the winning, score.

Gonzaga, by its defeat of the Little Generals, earns credit for accomplishing something the public high schools have failed. Central was the only club to match Washington-Lee's powerful line plays, earning no better than a stalemate. The victory gives the Purple a stronger bid for the favorite berth when it meets its arch-rival, St. John's, later in the season.

Navy 'B' Eleven Defeats 'Omelets'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Oct. 21.—Victory for the Navy B's (devastators over the Princeton "Omelets," 25 to 0, here this afternoon, is looked upon by the local contingent as a happy augury of a triumph in the big event in Baltimore tomorrow.

Anderson, the passin, ball carrying ace of the Navy B's, scored the first touchdown when he intercepted a Princeton pass and ran from his own 40 for a touchdown. In the same period. Fleming passed to Cooper for another six-pointer.

In the second quarter, Anderson scored again, on a short line drive, and after a scoreless third period, Savage registered the final touchdown for the Navy.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 21.—North Carolina and Duke, pace setters in the Southern Conference football race, are cast as favorites for their respective engagements with Davidson and Wake Forest tomorrow.

Davidson, however, will enter the game with a forward passing record for the season unequaled in the Southern Conference. In 59 attempts the Wildcats have completed 30 passes, 2 resulting in touchdowns and 4 others pvaing the way for scores.

The Blue Devils, victorious in four games without being scored on, and Wake Forest's Demon Deacons will help Winston-Salem citizens dedicate their new stadium, erected as a memorial to the late Bowman Gray. It will be the twenty-first meeting of the two teams whose football rivalry dates back to 1889. The Deacons are still smarting under a 67-0 walloping administered by Duke last year.

W.-L. Battles Tech

High spot of the week's gridiron warfare in Virginia will be the conference clash between Washington and Lee, victor over Kentucky of the Southeastern Conference, and Virginia Tech at Blacksburg.

V. M. I., unbeaten in the conference but tied by Clemson, will seek its first conference victory in a homecoming day contest with William and Mary at Williamsburg.

N. C. State and Furman will meet for the seventh time in a rivalry dating back to 1902. During the series the Wolfpack has come out victor only once, 27-0, in 1936. The game will be played at aRleigh.

The Citadel catches Tennessee fresh from a surprise victory over Alabama.

Richmond faces oRanoke in a non-conference battle. Three sophomores, two of them triple threats, loom as probable starters in the Spider backfield. Roanoke was cheered by the return of Bernard Pedneau, left-footed kicker regular backfielder who was injured in the Maroons' second game of the season.

Brown Joins Terps

Maryland's line troubles for the Virginia game have been relieved somewhat by the return of 216-pound tackle, Bob Brown. His size, speed and experience are expected to stand the Terps in good stead against the Cavaliers. Maryland plans to shoot the works offensively in an effort to cope with Virginia's Jim Gillette.

Clemson opened the week's conference campaigning yesterday with a 34-to-12 victory over South Carolina before a State fair crowd of 21,000.

Maryland Frosh Are Beaten, 6-0

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lexington, Va., Oct. 21.—Bobby Pinck, of Paterson, N. J., younger brother of the sensation sophomore, Dick Pinck, smashed through a powerful Maryland Frosh line for a lone touchdown today to provide Washington and Lee's Freshman gridmen with a 6-0 victory over the Old Liners.

Outweighed 15 pounds from end to end, the Brigadiers combined five first downs from their own 40 in a second-period drive that carried to the Little Terrapins' 2-yard stripe. Pinck, who had been instrumental in the drive, cracked his own left tackle for the score. A penalty nullified Bob Worthington's placement kick for conversion.

Devitt Eleven Triumphs, 14-0

Devitt Prep acquired its second victory in four starts this season yesterday by defeating the freshmen of Mount St. Mary's, 14-0, on the Emmitsburg (Md.) gridiron.

The two touchdowns were scored by Billy Richards and Kid Becker, halfbacks ,while both extra points were successfully place-kicked by Jake Fleischman, former McKinley High star.

Most brilliant play of the contest was turned in by Bronco Nicholson, another graduate from the public schools. His stellar play was backed by a ground-gaining backfield and a well-balanced line. The Mounts' star was Jim Ellison, last year's Gonzaga great.

Landon Beaten By Richmond

Saint Christopher Prep, of Richmond, defeated the Landon footballers, 14 to 0, yesterday on the latter's field.

At the start of the second period McCraw plunged over from the 4-yard line to register the Saints' first touchdown. Rueger took Maloney's punt and returned it 25 yards to the Landon 20, and on two plays C. Blanton made it a first down. McCraw then went over on his second try and F. Blanton converted, making it 7 to 0.

Landon's passing attack began to function in the third quarter, with Maloney tossing to Amussen for a gain of 18 yards. Landon lost the ball on downs, but soon recovered as Beverley fumbled on the 50-yard line. Maloney again tossed to Amussin to make first down. On the next play Rueger intercepted Maloney's pass and dashed 35 yards before being stopped. Beverley the npassed to McCraw to register a first down just as the third period ended.

Bullis Downs Shenandoah

Bullis Prep overcame a 3-0 first quarter deficit yesterday to defeat the Shenandoah Valley Military Academy, 13-0.

The Maryland team pushed over a pair of touchdowns in the second period to wipe out the lead that Shenandoah acquired through a 16-yard field goal by Halfback Devonshire who also accounted for his team's other points with a touchdown and a successful conversion kick.

Bullis' first touchdown was made by Jim O'Brien, who after setting up the score with runs of 17 and 21 yards, crossed the goal line on a 14-yard end run. Soon after Bullis made its second touchdown on a 35-yard pass from Paul Allemandi to Don Simler. Bob Beatty added the thirteenth point from placement.

G. W. Eleven In 7-7 Tie

Lynchburg Invades
G. W. in Rally

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 21.—George Washington High School's injury-ridden grid team rose to unexpected heights by gaining a 7-7 tie with the undefeated E. C. Glass High eleven, of Lynchburg, at the G. W. Stadium here tonight. More than 3,000 fans saw the Virginia Class A Conference encounter.

It was the third deadlock in five starts for the Senators, and George Washington's second tie against one victory and two losses.

Favored to win by at least two touchdowns, the heavier Glass eleven was set back on its heels early in the second period when the Presidents capitalized on a blocked punt and passed their way to the game's first touchdown. Jimmy Taylor, G. W. halfback, hurdled over the line to block Johnson's kick and recovered one the 40-yard line. Ed Wililams passed to Eddie Nowland for a net gain of 20 yards, and after one crack at the line failed to gain, another pass to Nowland was good for the touchdown. A placement for the extra point by Jimmy Taylor was blocked, but Nowland scooped up the free ball and dashed over the goal line to make it 7-0.

The Alexandrians, who had been badly outplayed in the opening period, were in the Senators' territory several times in the second and third period, but in the latter stanza their own passing attack kicked back when Elmo Gooden, Lynchburg guard, intercepted a pass intended for Dove and ran 70 yards for a touchdown. He made a sensational run, and at midfield appeared swamped by G. W. players, but he emerged from the scramble and headed for the goal line without further opposition. Read's place-kick for the extra point tied it up.

Baugh and Malone Will Not Start Game

Farkas, Hartman, Smith, Pinkert Get Call
Crowd of 25,000 Expected at Stadium

Baugh-to-Malone, professional football's most feared passing combination, will not answer the opening whistle tomorrow when Washington's Redskins take the field against the Philadelphia Eagles at Griffith Stadium.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty announced last night that Slingin' Sammy and 6-foot-4-inch Malone would not be in the Redskins' starting line-up, but would be withheld until the Eagles show their hand defensively.

MALONE

In the starting Redskins' backfield will be Riley Smith, quarterback; Bill Hartman and Ernie Pinckert at the halfbacks and Andy Farkas at fullback.

Flaherty thus will have in his opening backfield two trusty kickers—Smith and Hartman; two sturdy blockers—Pinckert and Smith; two hard-hitting ball carriers—Farkas and Hartman, and one capable passer—Hartman.

Baugh will be restrained on the bench until Flaherty surveys the defense that the Eagles have constructed for the Redskins' passing attack. Slingin' Sammy, with his shoulder still trussed in a bace, is expected to play at least half of the game, barring further injury by the team which incapacitated him in the season's opener.

Big Malone, Baugh's favorite target for his over-the-line bullet passes, wil be absent from the opening line-up only because he is still annoyed by an injured knee. But he is expected to take the field in company with Baugh when a substitution is made.

Bob McChesney, whose pass catching and defensive play was a highlight of the Redskins' victory over the Detroit Lions last Sunday, will replace Malone at leftend in the starting linee-up. He has been given the call over young Bob Masterson, sensational rookie from Florida.

Redskin headquarters anticipate a crowd of at least 25,000 for the battle with the Eagles. Only 3,000 reserved seats still remain on sale, but 14,000 general admission seats will be available.

Flaherty yesterday concentrated on the defense against Philadelphia's passes in the Redskins' workout. Hhe showed chief concern over the Eagles' habit of tossing long heaves to Joe Carter and Bill Hewitt, deft ends.

According to Redskin scouts, the Eagles' chief passing threat is a long heave to Carter or Hewitt in which the end, after leading the safety man down field, turns abruptly back toward the scrimmage line and takes the ball.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 21.—Winning her second purse in 21 starts this year, the Shandon Farm's Room Service defeated a good field of routers in The Plains, a battle of a mile and a sixteenth. The daughter of The Porter responded to Jockey H. Mora's urging to take command in the stretch and she seemed to have punch left as she crossed the line two and a half lengths ahead of Grass Cutter, representing George D. Widener. Pernie, the favorite, was one of those hindered by a poor start and was a well-beaten third in the field of eight.

Among the 7,000 spectators was Samuel D. Riddle, owner of War Admiral, who will watch his star work out tomorrow morning at Pimlico in preparation for the Seabiscuit race on November 1.

Room Service, favored by the heavy track, trailed the field going to the first turn but was powerfully handled by Jockey Mora. Grass Cutter was in motion at the break and set the pace until caught by Room Service entering the stretch. Room Service paid a $16.10 mutuel.

The daily double brought a sizable payoff of $121.20, the heavy money resulting from a surprise victory scored by the Tomara Stable's Banner Girl in the first race. Claimed out of her previous start, Banner Girl made good for her new owner with a $29.60 price tag attached, under Johnny Gilbert's riding.

The finishing touches were put in the "double" by Skagerrak in the third race. Paying $13.10, this St. Germans colt, drove into command in the stretch to win going away.

The day's steeplechase lacked the usual falls and brought victory to Swimalong, owned by Mrs. Arthur White.

The ancient son of Swinburne set the pace and lasted ahead of a determined close by John Bosley's Big March. Persian Prince was a prominent third in the field. Swimalong was well backed at a $6.10 mutuel.

BANNER GIRL rushed to contention at once and kept out in better going, drew out in early stretch, but had to be kept to pressure to stave off closing bid of ZENANA. The latter, unable to improve position while running along rail, came out and closed full of run. SARALIGHT broke well and raced close up before faltering in final stages. WAR REGALIA raced wide and was held safe. SECRET ROSE was not dangerous while racing in deep going. LADY TIMAROLE closed well. ANN MOWLEE came with rush after being far back. BEAMING LADY had early speed.

Selections at Laurel.

Dear Al,

With the feature positions given over to the young horses, this track offers a bang up program for today. The high point, of course, is the $10,000 added Selima Stake for 2-year-old fillies, the only race of its kind in this country. With 11 starters last year, the mile test was worth $24,430 to the winner, Jacola. There is every indication that a larger field will face the barrier today, as 19 were named in the overnight line-up. In addition to the turfdom's fair sex, the Maryland Handicap will be contested with 3-year-olds due for the action. Jacola, winner over Seabiscuit last week-end, picks up 10 pounds and will go postward probably as an odds-on favorite. She seems capable of holding her speed at the mile and a quarter route. Just what constitutes a foul around here perhaps never will be known. I picked Dip in that race last Thursday, and I am a great admirer of the spunk this one showed in taking the purse despite running out badly at the stretch turn. However, Dip definitely bumped Royal Business and seemed to have warranted a disqualification. There is no doubt but what Dip was much the best horse, but, to my mind, a foul is a foul, and a foul means disqualification. This situation always brings to my mind the case at Pimlico a few years back. One horse knocked another off stride and then went on to win. The stewards were quoted as saying that the fouled horse was definitely a "beaten horse" at the time of the foul and would have lost any way. A few days later these same horses met at almost identical weights and at the same distance and the so-called "beaten horse" escaped interference this time and downed his rival in a stretch drive. Perhaps the fouling rules have been revised just as the "certain amount of consistency is expected of all horses," which I brought up the other day, apparently is erased from the books.

BILL.

First race—Solvit surprised to win over a good field last Wednesday. He's meeting a cheap field of Maryland breds in this heat, looks like an easy winner. War Streak was left at the post in the Maryland Futurity and may be the dark horse of the race on fair New England form. War Moon was second in the Futurity.

Second race—Running behind handicap horses, Infidox beat White Cockade when they met and figure to run one, two in this heat in the order named. Both were winners at Havre and are hard to separate. RISSA finished well behind Kayak II and may bee the one to upset the dope.

Third race—Exploded came from behind to bea tthis field off a sprint race. With this last heat under his belt, he should win. Chief Onaway supplied most of the contention behind the top one and may be the one to beat. Felsun was an easy winner over maidens and likes the distance.

Fourth race—Dinner Date beeat the best juvenile fillies in the country when she won the Matron Stakes and Spinaway Stakes in New York. Winner of her last three starts she'll be right on edge in this encounter. Big Hurry also has won her last three heats, showing plenty of speed. In best form and may surprise at a price. Donita M. was a crackerjack filly this summer and may make trouble.

Fifth race—Jacola romped home in front of Seabiscuit last Saturday. Gets a break in the weights, and will be ready for the best. Handcuff was the champion filly of New England this summer, has been freshened up and prefers this distance. Aethelwold beat a fair horse in Jolly Tar and may be close.

Sixth race—Mr. Canron got away to a poor start when he came from behind to earn second place to Savage Beauty. In with light weight. If he gets away with the field he looks like the winner. Rust led home a good field in the Long Island Claiming Stakes in good time at Jamaica. Conquer has won last five but picks up weight.

Seventh race—Chasar closed determinedly behind Regal Lily to gain fourth place in allowance here. Going a sixteenth further today, he has fallen into a good spit. Kermay raced well with good company but quit badly in the final drive. The one to beat. Sir Reg had early foot in a distance race here.

Best bet—Solvit.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture)—The recovery of hog prices, dictated largely by producers who this week have clamped down on the marketward flow of swine, continued today with the restoration of an 18 top. The market has risen about 40 cents per hundredweight from its four-year low point reached early this week. Hogs were 10 to 15 cents higher in an active trade. The supply of 8,000 head was 2,000 smaller than expected and 6,000 smaller than a week ago. Cattle prices were little changed, but there was nothing strictly prime on sale and not enough well-finished grain-fed beeves were available to test the market accurately. Fat lambs continued to advance, gaining 25 to 35 cents, top rose to 8.85.

HOGS—Receipts, 8,000, including 2,500 direct; fairly active, 10-15 higher than Thursday's average; top, 8.00; bulk good and choice, 220-290 lbs., 7.85@8.00; few 310-330 lbs., butchers, 7.60@7.75; 180-210 lbs., 7.00@7.90; 150-170 lbs., 7.50@7.65; good 350-550 lbs., packing sows, 7.00@7.35; lighter weights up to 7.50.

CATTLE—Receipts, 1,000; calves, 500; generally steady market; very little beef in run; few loads steers, mainly holdovers from earlier in week, selling fully steady with Thursday at 8.25@10.00; choice lightweight Nebraskas held around 12.75; she stock in small supply; catch as catch can market on grass cows and heifers, including cutter grade cows, selling at 5.00 down to 4.00 and below; most beef cows 5.75@6.25; strictly good and choice kinds absent; not enough strictly grain-fed heifers here to make a market; bulls fully steady, however, with shippers taking weighty sausage offerings at 6.50@6.75; vealers 10.00@11.00; scarce; weekend stocker and feeder trade moderately active following downturn earlier in week.

SHEEP—Receipts, 4,000, including 1,500 direct; active; fat lambs and yearlings 25-35 higher; three doubles range lambs to shippers 7.75@7.85; good to choice natives, 8.50@8.75 freely; sorted lots to packers, 8.85; choice, 93-100 lbs. yearlings, up to 7.25@7.50; sheep strong; native ewes, 3.00@3.25.

Gold Imports Set New Peak

By the Associated Press.

Gold imports into the United States set a new record of $206,654,272 in the week ended October 14.

The Commerce Department said the figure was the highest for any week since weekly figures were initiated in 1934. Last week's imports of the metal, however, were only about $2,000,000 more than in the week ended September 30, and brought the imports for the last six weeks to more than $800,000,000.

The huge influx of gold was due to the European war crisis, which caused foreigners to send funds here for safekeeping. Gold was shipped to buy dollar credits.

Last week's shipments included $190,025,295 from England, $2,934,544 from France, $7,242,675 from the Netherlands, $4,024,281 from Canada and $1,462,859 from Brazil.

One result of the gold flood was to push United States Treasury holdings of the metal past $14,000,000,000—the largest amount ever held by any nation and equal to nearly 60 per cent of the world's monetary gold stock.

Life Policy Sales Steady in September

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 21.—During September sales of ordinary life insurance remained at approximately the level reached in August, when an upturn brought sales to within 16 per cent of August, 1937, according to figures just released by the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau. These data, based on reports from 54 companies, represent estimates of total ordinary insurance exclusive of group, sold by all companies operating in the United States. At the end of the third quarter of the year, sales are 21 per cent below last year's level.

September sales for the District of Columbia show slightly less than the usual seasonal declines from August to Steptember. The total for September was $3,935,000, which compares with $4,901,000 in the same month last year.

Integration Started by Big Utilities

Com. & Southern Buys Cities Service Sells Michigan Power Unit

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 21.—Consumers Power Co., Michigan operating subsidiary of the Commonwealth & Southern system, has purchased all of the operating property of the Citizens Light & Power Co., of Adrian, Mich., a unit of Cities Service Co., it was announced today. The transaction is the first of what utility experts believe will be a long list, brought about as a result of integration provisions of the public utility holding company act of 1935.

The contract price is approximately $3,200,000, and the sale is subject to the approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Application for approval will be filed with both commissions, probably early in the coming week. It is understood in utility circles that the Securities and Exchange Commission has given a preliminary approval of the transaction in principle.

The property included in the sale is the generation, transmission and distribution facilities at Adrian, serving parts of Monroe and Lennawe counties in southeast Michigan and contiguous to territory at present served by the Consumers Power Co.

The sale was concluded late yesterday after several months of negotiations between Wendell L. Willkie, chairman and president of Commonwealth & Southern, and W. Alton Jones, executive vice president of Cities Service.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 21.—A firm tendency prevailed at the close of the stock market today, with industrials and metal shares in good demand at higher prices. Transatlantic securities finished with gains of 1 to 2 points and British government issues held steady. Oil and brewing issues sold higher and electric and musical instrument issues were purchased freely on the radio corporation's television announcement. Rubber and gold mining stocks were featureless.

Paris—the bourse closed with a firm tone today and all sections were higher. French rentes were in centimes lower to 65 up and Bank of France issue gained 500 francs. Suez Canal advanced 300 francs and Royal Dutch about 100.

Liverpool—Wheat futures moved irregularly today, opening higher on unfavorable Australian crop advices, reacting during the middle of the session, and turning firm again on higher Buenos Aires and North American prices. Cotton futures moved up 4 to 7 points, buying being influenced by firm overseas markets and more optimistic American business prospects.

Interest in Pro Game Growing, Baugh Says

Points Out Increasing Attendance Skeptics Were Answered Last Sunday Boys Give All When in There Battling

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh.

(Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.)

The last week-end in professional football was a hard-hitting answer to the critics of the game. I mean to the people who have said that the pro game would never enjoy any great success, because fans would weary of it. At Detroit the Redskins and the Detroit Lions drew more than 42,000 paid admissions, a record crowd for Detroit. There never has been any so-called rivalry between the Lions and the Redskins, yet the Detroit attendance record was broken by more than 16,000.

SAMMY BAUGH.

And at least as remarkable as that crowd was the crowd of 33,000 fans who saw the Philadelphia Eagles play the New York Giants in the Polo Grounds on the same day. The Philadelphia club is next to last in the Eastern Division standings, yet the game produced that kind of a crowd.

Pro football has apparently convinced the skeptics who used to say that the pros played only for their pay checks and didn't put any fire and spirit into the game. The pros were pictured as guys interested chiefly in their pay envelopes and trying to save themselves from too much punishment on the field.

Well, anybody who has seen a professional game, knows that is not true. And you can take it from a fellow who has been in the thick of the league's toughest game for the past two seasons—myself—that when that opening whistle blows, the pros are collegians all over again as far as zest is concerned.

As I have said before, you have to like this game to be a good football player, and thus there never was a pro who, deep down, didn't like it. He'd have to, to be willing to take the bumps. But what I mean to say is that anyone who gives a hang for it, wants to play it up to the hilt.

I'll give you an analogy. If a fellow on the street hauled off and socked you, what would be your first thought? You wouldn't stop to reflect whether you're getting paid for hitting back, would you? Well, then, as I saying: When that opening whistle blows, the pros are out there playing football not because they are getting paid for it, but because they can't resist playing as best they know how.

In every game in the league we always see $150-per-game players playing alongside of $250-per game men, or $300 per game men or even fellows who are higher paid. But I have never seen that fact affect anybody's play, either. If there is any jealously among the players, you'd never suspect it by their actions.

I dare say that there are more jealousies in college football what with fraternities and things, than there are in the pro league. At least that has been my experience.

I don't think it is true, either, that we have all these free-scoring games in the pro league simply because the coaches want to put on a spectacular show that will bring the customers back.

The coaches are better pleased, of course, if the game turns out to be spectacular, but their main idea is to win. After all, you can't fire a winning coach. At least you're not supposed to.

The reason we have spectacular games in the pro league is fairly obvious to me. With its elastic forward passing rule and its field goal threats, the pro league has favored the offense.

When a team scores one touchdown and takes a lead, it can't afford to play strictly a defensive game as many college teams do. Because one touchdown is rarely a comfortable margin in the pro league. The threat of the opposition's attack is too great and the team that has scored must go out and add to its lead if it wants to feel secure.

Thus we don't have dull ball games in the pro league. Perhaps that's why the fans are turning out for our games in increasing numbers. Perhaps its because they have finally realized that the pros are out there giving 100 per cent. Anyway, it seems we are being appreciated. And we appreciate that.

Horse

Randle's Virginia team No. 3, tied for first place with a total of 13 faults each. The District of Columbia team was close behind them with 14 faults, followed by the Maryland team with 19½ faults. Donald Southerland 3d's New York State team had 20 faults and Fritz Kleeman's Virginia team No. 2 brought up the rear with 24 faults.

The best single performance was turned in by Randle's Way, the swift-moving chestnut gelding having but one fault. Hunger Marcher, of the Maryland team owned and ridden by Charles Carrico, was second with 2½ faults. Whoopee was the top horse of Virginia's No. 1 team with 3½ faults.

D. C. Still Up There

The District of Columbia's team is still decidedly in the running, being but 1 point back of the leaders. Unless the New York State team and Virginia's No. 2 team turn in much better performances, they will have small chance of overtaking the leaders.

Agreeable mounts to hounds was the first consideration, with pace, manners, way of going and style of jumping all factors in judging the ladies' working hunters class which brought together a fine field. The beautifully mannered Jinwich, a real qualified hunter, owned and ridden by Miss Jane S. Kromer, took the blue. Hunter's Choice, a beautiful bay gelding ridden by Mrs. Weatherall and owned by the Greenhalgh Stables, was second, and Chelsea Ruscus of the Nydrie Stables, third. Sport Marvel, U. S. Randle's great hunter with Margaret Cotter up, turned in an excellent performance that had to be satisfied with fourth place.

Sixteen horses out of the 46 entered went clean over this punishing course and the jump-off was run over the brush and six other jumps which were raised; the Toronto bank, the rustic fence and white fence, the brick wall and the double fence.

Five Get Over

Five horses negotiated this course; Randal's Way, Sandy, of the Fort Myer Horse Show team; Tolteca, of the Mexican army team; Masquerader, of the United States Army team, and Dos Estrellas, owned and ridden by Capt. A. A. Frierson. The decision rested on the time of each horse over the course. The indomnitable little Sandy, winner of yesterday's open jumping feature, repeated today and took the blue. Sandy was ridden to victory by Capt. Henri Leubberman, one of the Third Cavalry's best riders. The red ribbon went to the Mexican army team's spectacular jumper, Tolteca, expertly ridden by Lieut. Joaquim Chagoya. Capt. A. A. Frierson's Dos Estrellas, ridden by the owner, was third and the United States Army team's Masquerader, with Lieut. Sanford up, took fourth.

There were ten entries in the Ladies' Hunters class for the trophy, donated by W. H. Lipscomb. Conformation, soundness and quality counted 40 per cent, style of jumping and way of going 60 per cent. Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh made a clean sweep of the first three places in this class. Their magnificent hunter, Merry Prince, ridden by Mrs. Weatherall, took the blue, with Hunter's Choice and Petit Poule taking the red and yellow. Mrs. Lee's Willow 2d took fourth.

Summary of events:

Hunter hack—First, Protest, owned by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, ridden by Mrs. Kitty Weatherall; second, Randle's Find, owned and ridden by U. S. Randle; third, Recall, owned and ridden by Charles Carrico; fourth, Hunter's Choice, owned by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh and ridden by Blakeley Lodge.

State team jumping — First, Virginia Team No. 1, entered by Morris S. Clark-Whoopee, ridden by the owner; Royal York, ridden by Alex Calvert; Gay Cockade, ridden by the owner; Hobo, ridden by Alex Calvert. Score, 13. Tied for first. Virginia team No. 3 entered by U. S. Randle—Randle's Way, ridden by Bill Shawn; So Long, ridden by Bill Shawn; Sport Marvel, ridden by Shirley Payne, and Merry Prince, ridden by Shirley Payne. Athletic 'Babying' Defended by Doctor

Hannibal, Mo., Oct. 21 (AP).—Present-day athlets, especially baseball pitchers, are not "babied too much" with excessive physical care and treatment, Dr. Arthur E. Allen, of Minneapolis, president of the American Osteopathic Association, said today.

Dr. Allen, speaking at the convention of the Missouri Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons, said modern methods of treating injuries and sprains made pitchers "last longer" than in the early days of baseball.

"Twenty-five years ago," he said, "a glass arm meant one of two things, either a shoulder muscle strain to be worked out by use, or an arm that had gone dead. Now, because of improved diagnosis and treatments, we are able to restore a majority of such cases."

A few salient points about an enchanting home in a grove of fine old trees—

Of course the dining room affords lovely views; the kitchen is replete with modern appointments; and the 4 bedrooms and 2 exquisite baths are well arranged, but what I want to talk about is the living room. You will like the huge oak beams and the massive stone fireplace. Delightfully shaded, stippled walls symbolize the best decorative features of the period. It's a hospitable room, a living room in the truest sense of the word. And now a quick trip to the lounge room where good cheer and fellowship prevail. There are 3 little windows, a quaint lantern and a love nest in the corner with encircling benches, and a rugged fireplace in natural stone finished to ceiling height and many other things I haven't time to tell you about here. Call me up. I will gladly give you further particulars. Price only $11,850. J. WESLEY BUCHANAN.

The Timid Soul

OH, MY GRACIOUS! THE GRASS AND WEEDS WERE SO TALL I NEVER SAW THAT SIGN!
MR. MILQUETOAST, IN TAKING A SHORT CUT ACROSS A NEIGHBOR'S PLACE (VACANT FOR 15 YEARS), FINDS HE HAS FLAGRANTLY DISREGARDED A SIGN

Bob Burns Says—

Hollywood is a place where pretty near everyone dresses and looks the part they're playing. One glance'll tell pretty closely what they are, but once in a while a stranger comes to town and fools us.

The other day a quiet looking, plain, reserved lady called on a doctor here and told him her nerves were bad. The doctor took one look at her and says, "What you need is a change." The lady looked at the doctor demurely and said, "Well, for the past 18 months I have lived in 5 countries, had 3 husbands, 4 cars, 13 jewel robberies, 11 alarm clocks, and 47 landlords. What other changes could you suggest?"

Shoes Needed By Students, P.-T.A. Reveals

Apparel Donated
Rescue Work Told

At least 100 calls for shoes have had to be turned down by the student aid committee of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers during the past two days, Mrs. L. S. Brooks, chairman, told visitors who inspected the project yesterday as part of the "Go and See' campaign of the Community Chest.

The student aid committee, which has its distributing office at Gales School on First street northeast, receives $1,200 annually from the Chest to be used in the purchase of shoes and rubbers for needy school children.

"The shoe problem is our biggest one. In the bundles we get from schools and individuals we receive dresses and coats and underwear, but we never receive enough shoes."

Need Boys' Clothes

"We also often run short on clothes for boys, for they have a way of wearing things out and our bundles have very few second-hand things from them," Mrs. Brooks said.

Sociology classes from various high scholos made up the bulk of visitors to the three Community Chest agencies open yesterday. The boys and girls fired questions at the committee members in charge and made numerous notes on the various projects. In addtion to the P.-T. A. student aid work, they saw what was going on at the Animal Rescue League and at Friendship House.

Helping Mrs. Brooks answer questions at Gales School were Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the congress; Mrs. E. J. Dowling, vice president in charge of child welfare, and other committee members. Mrs. Charles Augustus Simpson was hostess at Animal Rescue League headquarters and Mrs. James H. Baden at the settlement house.

Cats Usual Majority

More than 20,000 animals find temporary homes and protection at the league each year, the visitors were told. Strangely enough, the hostess said, more than half the animals are cats. Several horses a year, an occasional cow and a few goats and pigeons make up the usual assortment. Dogs were in a big mapority yesterday, however, and provided ample noise and entertainment for the day-at-home.

"We often get horses," the hostess said. "If we hear of a horse that is very sad, we go out and try to buy him.

"We are very proud at the league now that we have the beginnings of a real clinic here for animal treatments. It is being promoted by the Tail Waggers and will be of great benefit to us."

AAA Will Seek Laws to Beautify Baltimore Blvd.

Describing "unsightly conditions" along the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard as a "disgrace to the Nation's Capital," the advisory board of the American Automobile Association yesterday announced plans to seek legislation to improve the highway's beauty.

A report on the boulevard conditions was given by Mrs. Walter Fry at the board monthly luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel.

John Vandergrift, Stanley Horner and Washington I. Cleveland were named to attend the A. A. A. annual meeting in Cleveland November 18 and 19.

Lindbergh Spurs Nazis To Zeppelin Service

Berlin, Oct. 21 (AP).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today expressed the hope that German airships soon would cross the Atlantic again in regular flights to America.

The aviator inspected the new dirigible LZ-130 at Friedrichshafen, and visited the nearby Dornier Airplane Works, where he flew several planes.
